

Girls More Industrious Than Boys, Say Teachers
London, June 9.—Scientists here who have been studying boys' and girls' work in schools have concluded that girls are more industrious and conscientious; in case of heavy duty, boys will dodge, but girls will break down trying; boys excel in mathematics but it is a close race in literature, history, poetry and languages.

'Love Psychology' Urged As a New College Study
Berkeley, Cal., June 9.—The Campus Bee, a University of California student publication, in its latest issue, makes a plea for university "credits" for the study of "psychology of love," a subject now pursued by some of the collegians without official recognition of the university authorities. Dan S. Marovich, publisher, and one of the editors of the Bee, declares that if the gentle hint of his magazine is not given attention by the college officials, petitions to the regents may be drafted to place the study of love psychology on a par with that of zoology, Chinese history, Sanskrit and other subjects for which credits toward graduation are awarded. In defending the proposed innovation, the Bee Buzzes as follows: "Love, and hate, and jealousy, and ambition; personal rivalries, moral conflicts, emotional struggles—these are the very staff of life. Every family and every community is a laboratory of them. And there are more text books of them than of all other subjects combined. All poetry, all imaginative literature, and most biography and history deal with them.

"Most stories are love stories, most poetry is love poetry, and most of the joy and sorrow, the comedy, the glory and the tragedy of life turn upon love. It is central to everything but the school. "But the school is the descendant of the cloister. And cloister knew not love."

Saw Death Coming, So He Refused to Marry
Franklin, N. H., June 9.—The premonition of death which haunted Joseph A. Menard, 18, of this town, was so strong that the youth postponed his wedding. "I'll be dead in March," he told his fiancée. He is dead. The wedding had been set for the week following Easter. Although young Menard was in good health and spirits, he made this despondent prediction. He was stricken with a shock which proved fatal. French Send 500 Tons of Propaganda to U. S. Yearly Paris, June 9.—The extent of the French propaganda in the United States is indicated by figures just published here which show that nearly 500 tons of French literature are exported to America every year. Only 48 tons are exported annually to England. In January alone, 28 tons of books and pamphlets in the French language were sent to the United States, which is now third on the list of French-reading nations, Belgium being second.

Seeking and Finding

One of Omaha's fine editorial writers speaks of O. Henry's story of the little dog. The dog, O. Henry said, lived with a very ordinary couple in a very ordinary little flat, in which was a very ordinary little bay window where he lay for hours every day in the sunshine, looking down at the other dogs on the street and wondering when he was going to have his day. But the little dog had "his day." He had but known it. He had his comfortable surroundings and his sunshine. He could, had he but known how to do it, enjoy the fun which the dogs in the street were having. All he need have done was to learn to obtain pleasure in the happiness of others and to appreciate the blessings he already had. That's a simple little story, but we really find our best lessons in simple tales. In the story of O. Henry's dog we obtain the hint that the greatest happiness is won by those who learn—and never forget—to appreciate the simple blessings. There are so many men and women who are strong and healthy, yet who habitually bemoan their "misfortunes." Let them look at the crippled, the insane or the sick. Then they will be tempted to blush for their lack of appreciation. There are those who not only have three meals a day, but have the capacity to digest them—ham hock, cabbage and all. Let them think of the multimillionaire who could buy a warehouse full of food, but can hardly digest a plate of ice cream. There are those who envy the rich in their ability to take long journeys; but sometimes the richest are taking these journeys simply because they are still searching for the happiness which their money has never bought. They have not learned that happiness is at their feet rather than at the rainbow's end, and they are searching—ever searching. There are rich people who are happy, but their happiness does not come from their wealth. It comes to the rich, even as to the so-called poor, through "perpetual quietness of heart." It comes only to those who have the vision to see beauty everywhere—in the unnumbered blades of grass that now combine to make a veritable carpet for this grand old earth of ours, in the vibrant but beautiful blossom that passes for a weed, or in the noble penny, grander and nobler at this time than in all its proud career. It is in "the constant, conscious capacity to understand God"—rather than in the possession of gold—that man finds his genuine joy. J. L. BRANDEIS & SONS.

The Netherall for Summer Comfort

Wherever smartly dressed women congregate, there you will find The Netherall—it is essential to careful grooming. Beautifully moulding the figure The Netherall prevents spreading as well, and it's just about the most comfortable thing you can put on. Supple, flexible, sleek, it encourages activity and "improves your game" no matter if it be golf, bridge or just being ornamental. The Netherall is three garments in one—vest, bust confiner and girdle, and yet it takes but a minute to adjust. Easily laundered, too—tub it like a pair of silk hose. Made of summer mesh, silk Milanese and various combinations to suit individual preferences. The colors are white, flesh and orchid. Priced 3.50 to 10.00.

The Circlet's the Thing Now!

It slenderness the whole figure above the waistline. "It Beautifies as it Encircles" No more bulges at the shoulders or under the arms. A Circlet seems to dissolve them. Actually, it distributes the flesh so equally that your figure takes on new smooth, symmetrical lines—so supple and lithe looking. A Circlet fits as well every time you wear it—after laundering, too. It's self-adjustable. The model pictured at 1.00 is extraordinary value. Pink or white batiste; sizes 38 to 48. Third Floor—North
