fast. Mother Bear was walking fast, but Little Bear could have kept up without any trouble if she had wanted to. She kept expecting Mother Bear to wait for her, as Mother Bear had been in the habit of doing. But Mother Bear didn't wait. This fact annoyed Little Bear still more.

"It's because she doesn't care about me any more," grumbled Little Bear to herself. "She don't care what becomes of me. If she did, she would wait for me. I'll run away. I will, I will."

Little Bear sat down. Mother Bear and Brother and Sister were out of sight. Little Bear waited a few minutes to see if Mother Bear would come back. Mother Bear didn't. Little Bear started off in another direction as fast as her short legs would take her. She actually was running away. Yes, sir, she actually was running away.

Little Bear waited a few minutes to see if Mother Bear would come back. Mother Bear didn't. Little Bear started off in another direction as fast as her short legs would take her. She actually was running away. Yes, sir, she actually was running away.

She didn't pay any attention to where she was going. There was only one thought in that foolish little head of hers, and that was to get as far as she could before Mother Bear would discover that she was no longer following. So she ran and ran and ran and ran until she was quite out of breath, and until her short legs fairly ached.

Then she climbed a tree. Little Bears always feel safer in a tree. For that matter, big Bears often seem to feel safer in a tree. So Little Bear climbed a tree, where she found a comfortable seat in a crotch and prepared to take a rest. She didn't intend to go to sleep, but she did. You know she was still a very small Bear, and she was very tired. She was asleep almost before she had had time to wonder if Mother Bear had begun to look for her yet.

The next story, "Little Bear Is Lonesome."
