

Horsemen Here Given Banquet

More Than $1,500 Subscribed for Purchase of Stallion Under Army System.

Three hundred visiting and local horsemen were guests Thursday night of officials of the Union stockyards, represented by Everett Buckingham, at a dinner in the Livestock exchange. All of the visitors had had one or more entries in the Ak-Sar-Ben running races.

Charles B. Irwin, Cheyenne, Wyo., trainer of Abadane, which won the King's derby Saturday, was toastmaster.

Charles L. Trimble, N. B. Updike, Everett Buckingham, C. J. Lane of the Union Pacific, W. B. Tarr, M. C. Peters, W. Cox, T. C. Byrne and E. P. Peck spoke for the Omaha followers. Charles R. Gardner, "Samson," sang.

Speakers for the visitors were M. J. Ronin, secretary of the Nebraska state racing commission; Ben Jones, Farnell, Mo.; George Schilling, publicity director; J. H. Barton, Springfield, Ill.; J. McKay, Reno, Nev.;

George Elrick and E. Linnell, San Francisco; C. E. Groves, F. C. Marner and W. Simms of San Diego, Cal.; Dr. C. P. Smeed, Ralston, Neb.; W. M. Cain, Louisville, Ky.; William Bondas, Latonia, Ky.

Unanimous in Praise.

The visiting horsemen were unanimous in their praise of their reception in Omaha, the racing facilities and only regretted the fact that rain had made the track slow.

Major Gen. George B. Duncan and staff were guests. Col. Frank Halstead, staff officer, spoke on "Spark Plug and the Remount Service of the United States Army."

Subscription of more than $1,500 was made up among those present to be later increased to $2,500 for the purchase of a thoroughbred stallion under the provisions of the army system.

General Duncan spoke for the government in sponsoring the Omaha purchase.

Peters in Charge.

Mr. Peters was appointed to care for the selection of the animal from the suggestions offered by the army officials, and also to obtain voluntary contributions to swell the subscription fund.

Mr. Trimble, secretary of Ak-Sar-Ben races, said he was satisfied with the progress made in Omaha races field since three years ago.

"Then," said Mr. Trimble, "we had a mediocre card. Now we have entries which run on the best tracks in the country. The Daily Racing Form of Chicago is now carrying Omaha in the same space it devoted to Latonia, Louisville, Havana, Belmont Park, Tijuana and New Orleans.

"Our officials are the best that can be secured and the fact that they are recognized is shown in the type of the entries."

The horsemen expressed their gratitude to the stockyards company for the opportunity of getting together and meeting as friends and not as merely business associates.

An angry mother few can face; Avoiding her is no disgrace. —Yowler the Bob Cat.

An Exciting Moment.

Littlest Bear so shocked by the discovery that Yowler the Bob Cat could climb a tree as well as she could that for a second or two she just clung to her branch and stared with unbelieving eyes. Then she realized that she was no longer safe. With a cry of fright she turned and scrambled up, crying all the way. Up and up and up she went until she was in the very top of that tree.

Up and up and up came Yowler the Bob Cat. Yowler was nervous. He kept stopping every few feet to listen and to look anxiously for signs of Mother Bear. He felt sure that that little bear was lost, but there was no knowing how near Mother Bear might be, and if she should hear that little Bear's cries she would come in a hurry. How Yowler did wish that little Bear would stop crying!

Now, Littlest Bear was so small that she could climb up where the top of that tree was very slender and small. There she hung on with the claws of all four feet, and cried as only a frightened little Bear can cry. Yowler didn't dare climb quite high enough to reach her. He was too big. He stopped just a little below her, and tried to think of some way of making her let go.

Suddenly there was an angry "woof, woof" just below, and the sound of great claws digging into the trunk of that tree. One glance down was enough for Yowler. There was Mother Bear coming up that tree at a rate that was astonishing in one so big! One look was enough. Yowler started down, and he went down twice as fast as he had come up. He ran out on the first big branch he came to. Just as Mother Bear reached that branch Yowler made a flying leap and caught a branch of the next tree. There he hung for a moment, vainly trying to pull himself up on it. Then he slipped and dropped. Fortunately for him there was a big branch just below him, and this one he succeeded in holding onto. He pulled himself up on it, and then with a screech of rage and disappointment he climbed down from that tree and disappeared the instant he reached the ground.

You should have seen Littlest Bear scramble down from her high perch.

scramble down from her high perch. She couldn't get down to Mother Bear quick enough. No, sir, she couldn't get down to Mother Bear quick enough. She forgot that she might be punished. She forgot that she had run away. She forgot everything but the desire to get right close to Mother Bear.

Mother Bear didn't wait for her. She promptly started down the tree herself. After her scrambled Littlest Bear as fast as she could, and she was whimpering again. But this time the whimpers were little whimpers of joy. Littlest Bear didn't intend to let Mother Bear out of her sight again as long as she lived. Anyway, that is the way she felt just then. When Mother Bear reached the ground she waited for Littlest Bear. She didn't have to wait but a second or two. Then without a word Mother Bear turned and led the way to where she had left Brother and Sister up in a tree. And Littlest Bear kept so close to her heels that she almost stepped on them.
