

President Favors Tax Reduction Measures

 one-half. It is a record of business administration to which the party now in control of the administration feels justified in referring with no small measure of satisfaction.

Cost $10,000,000,000.

I have observed that the cost of war to our government was around $40,000,000,000. After paying a generous share, about 25 per cent, from current revenues directed while the war was in progress, we still had to borrow enormously. At its highest point, on August 31, 1919, the national debt was $26,596,000,000. I know you will be interested to be told that from that day, August 31, 1919, to June 30, 1923, we have reduced it to $22,400,000,000—a reduction of considerably more than a billion dollars a year. Moreover, we are now working under a program which involves extinguishing a half billion of the debt each year. No other country in the world has been able to make such a record.

In addition to all this, we have, within the past year, settled the British war debt to our government, arranged for its funding and its gradual extinction over a long period of years. In recognition of the notable service of Secretary Mellon, his associates at the treasury, and the members of the debt funding commission and the American ambassador to Great Britain, I wish to say that this settlement of the British debt has been acclaimed all over the world as one of the most notable and successful fiscal accomplishments ever recorded. Not only does it assure that the British government will make to our treasury what correspondingly relieves the burden upon American taxpayers, but the more important fact, in a time of widespread uncertainty and giving throughout the world of hysterical suggestions that these two great governments could get together and arrange such a settlement has been one of the most reassuring events since the armistice.

Too Much Talk.

There has been too much talk of possible cancellations or repudiations of the war debt. Such a program would wrecked the entire structure of business faith and of confidence in the obligations of governments throughout the world. There was need, pressing and urgent need, for such a sign of confidence, assurance and faith in the future as this settlement furnished. When the British and American governments united in this pledge that their obligations would be met to the last shilling and the last dollar, there was renewed financial confidence in the world. I undertake to say that no event since the conclusion of hostilities has contributed so much to putting the world back on its way to stabilization, to confidence in its government, and to the establishment of that our special institutions are yet secure.

No consideration of public finances can omit the fact that the single item of interest on the public debt exceeds $1,000,000,000 annually. For the fiscal year 1923, this item will be $1,100,000,000. Beyond this year will reduce the public debt by approximately $500,000,000. That is, over 35 per cent of the national revenue will this year go to paying interest or extinguishing the principal of the public debt.

I have not been able to gather conclusive statistics as to the accomplishments of states, cities and counties, to compare with this showing of the federal government. But with some general knowledge of the fiscal positions of states and cities in general, I feel quite safe in proffering my congratulations to any state, any city, any foreign country, which has made a better showing in the matter of reducing its public debt within the period since the war. I most earnestly regret that all have not been able to make a similar showing.

Taxation Local Question.

On this latter point I wish to say a word further. Taxation decidedly is a local as well as a national question. Prior to the war federal taxation was an unimportant item; so small that in 1917 state and local taxes, in a group of 10 representative states, constituted 73 per cent of the entire tax burden.

The federal tax was indirect and unfair. Then came the enormous cost of the war, which the federal government had to bear, and in 1918 state and local taxes constituted only 42 per cent of the entire tax burden. In 1919 they represented 44 per cent of the whole; in 1920, 41 per cent. But in 1922, the last year for which figures are available, state and local taxes were again in excess and represented 69 per cent of the entire tax burden. The states represented in this calculation are Arizona, Connecticut, Michigan, Minnesota, New Hampshire, Ohio, Oregon, South Dakota, Washington and Wisconsin. Its unequal public expenditures, its people required the spending habit during the war to an extent not merely unprecedented, but absolutely alarming. There is but one way for the community finally to get back on its feet, and that is to go seriously about paying its debts and reducing its expense. That is what the world must face. The greatest and richest government must face it, and so must the humblest citizen. No habit is so easy to form, none so hard to break, as that of reckless spending.

And on the other side, none is more certain to contribute to security and happiness, than the habit of thrift, of saving, of a careful management of all business concerns, of balanced budgets and living within incomes. If I could urge upon the American people a single rule applicable to every one of them as individuals, and to every political or corporate unit among them, it would be to learn to spend somewhat less than your income all the time. If you have debts, reduce them as rapidly as you can; if you are one of the fortunate few who have no debts, make it a rule to save something every year.

Keep your eye everlastingly on those who administer your governmental units for you: your town, your county, your state, your national government. Make them understand that you are applying the rule of thrift and savings in your personal affairs, and require them to apply it in their management of your public affairs. If they fail, find other public servants who will succeed. If they succeed, give them such encouragement and inspiration as will be represented by a full measure of hearty appreciation for their efforts.

This brings me to a brief reference to what has proven so helpful to the federal government in effecting the approach to the expenditures of normal times. For the first time in our history we have the national budget, under which there is an effective scrutiny of estimates for public expenditure. More, we have co-ordinated government activities in making the expenditures which congress authorizes.

Budget No Easy Task.

It seems now unbelievable that we should have been willing to go for a century and a third without this helpful agency of business administration. But we did, and only now have we come to an appraisal of the cost of this great neglect.

It has been no easy task to establish the budget and make sure of its acceptance. Out of long time practices the varied and many government departments felt themselves independent institutions, instead of factors in the great machinery of government administration. They often got all they could from congress, and made it a point to expend all they got.

Under the budget plan we were able to reverse the policy and awaken an spirit of economy and efficiency in the public service. We not only insisted that requests for appropriations should stand the minutest inquiry, but after reduced appropriations were granted, we insisted on expending less than the appropriations. There was no proposal to diminish government activities and required by law or demanded by public need, but there was first the commitment to efficiency and then commendable strife for economy.

We effaced the inexcusable and very costly impression that government departments must expend all their appropriations, that no available cash should return to the treasury. And we sought to inspire as well as exact, in the practices of economy.

Gives Illustration.

One illustration will not be amiss. On June 8, 1921, before the budget was in operation, word came to me that the business head of one of our institutions, here from Washington, was puzzling her to expend $12,000 which he had in excess of actual needs. Ordinarily such a matter would never reach the chief executive. But this one did, and I wired a warning, and followed it with a letter reciting the need of retrenchment everywhere, and expressed the hope that every government official with spending authority would help in reducing the government outlay. The appeal was effective, and this one government agent not only saved most of his available $12,000 for that fiscal year, but in 1922 he saved $81,000 more. He proved what could be done, and we are seeking to do it everywhere.

Do not imagine it has all been easy. It is very popular to expend, and there are ruffled feelings in every case of denial. But there is gratifying results in firm resolution and the consistent application of business methods.

The budget director is the agent of the president, and he speaks on the authority of the government's chief executive. One day last winter the director came to me in great anxiety, telling me that a department chief would not sanction an $8,000 cut in his estimates. At that time we were seeking to prevent a threatened excess of expenditures over receipts amounting to $800,000,000 for the next fiscal year.

I sent for the department head, and he was still insistent in his opposition to the reduced estimate. I called for a conference of the department experts and the budget experts, and told them that if they could not agree, I would decide. They conferred, and instead of returning to me for decision, the estimate was cut more than $12,000,000.

The point is that we have introduced business methods in government, and instead of operating blindly and to suit individual departments which had never visualized the government as a whole, and felt no concern about the raising of funds, we are scrutinizing, justifying, co-ordinating, and not only halting mounting cost, but making long strides in reducing the cost of government activities.

Perhaps the budget system would not accomplish so much for taxing and spending divisions smaller than the state, but a resolute commitment to strike at all extravagance and expend public funds as one would for himself in his personal and business affairs will accomplish wonders.

It is largely unmindfulness that piles up the burden. Able and honorable men often press for a federal expenditure to be made in their own community or in other ways helpful to their own interests which they would strongly oppose if they are not directly concerned. This is true of federal appropriation as well as municipal, county, and state expenditure, and I know of no remedy unless public officials are brought to understand the menace in excessive tax burdens and indebtedness, beyond extinguishment except in drastic action, and resolve to employ practicable business methods in government everywhere, and resist the assault of the spenders.

If it is too early to know whether there is a republic of ancient times with which approximately to parallel our own. We know of their rise and fall, and we may learn the lessons in their failures. A simple-living, thrifty people, with simple, honest, and just government never failed to grow in influence and power. The coming of extravagance and profligacy in private life, and wastefulness and excesses in public life ever proclaimed the failures which history has recorded.

I would not urge the stingy, skimpy, hoarding life of individuals, or an inadequate program of government. The latter must always rise to liberate public demand. But private life and public practices are inseparably associated.

I would have our government adequate in every locality and in every activity and public sentiment will demand it and secure it, and require no more, if we may have the simple and thrifty life which makes the healthful nation.

These reflections, my countrymen, are not conceived in doubt or pessimism. We have so nobly begun, we are so boundless in resources, we have wrought so notably in our short national life, that I wish these United States to go on securely. I would like developing dangers noted and appraised and intelligently and patriotically guarded against. A hearty appreciation for their efforts.
