"Heaven Wide Open."
She Defines True Love.
Dempsey's Chopping Block.
Making Nations Hate Us.
By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Jane Addams, ill in Japan, must undergo a serious operation. This is alarming news for millions that know the work Miss Addams has done and the example she has set before the world—even more valuable than her work.

Max Hart, Chicago, lurching with his brother Harry, said Tuesday, "Everybody hopes Miss Addams will live to be a hundred. But you should republish the article you wrote about her many years ago." I remember the last lines. They were:

"Lucky the man who dies on the day of Jane Addams death. The doors of heaven, on that day, will open so wide that all may enter." If pure goodness, unselfishness and devotion count in heaven, as we believe they do, Jane Addams will have a seat in front of Washington, Jefferson and many others, and very likely next to Lincoln.

An exact definition is precious emotion, especially a definition of love, that complicated thing. Miss Peggy Joyce, whose career of intense romance is known to all that read the big headlines, has supplied the definition. She is the young lady well described as "easy on the eyes." "I don't want money but love, the great, grand understanding kind of love." This being the case with Miss Joyce, you will not be surprised to hear that she has decided, if possible, to marry Mr. Lou Tellegen, until lately the property of Miss Geraldine Farrar.

Miss Joyce described love, with a capital "L" dressed in a cherry crepe gown, with cherry sport hat and cherry sport shoes to match. A diamond necklace, looking, the reporter said, like large cracked ice, was worn in memory for her second husband. Other jewels, also diamonds, in memory of the fourth. One and three were not represented. Heloise didn't begin to understand love or style, as Peggy Joyce understands both. As for Abelard, he would be only "at-mosphere" in a Lou Tellegen picture.

They found a "chopping block" for Mr. Jack Dempsey, a certain giant, Ben Wray of Oklahoma. Mr. Wray is seven feet, two inches tall, heavy in proportion. Dempsey knocked him senseless in 30 seconds. There was great admiration in the crowd, for such "science." An orang-outang four feet high, in the featherweight class, could knock Dempsey senseless in three seconds and Dempsey would never come back to consciousness. We call that "brute strength."

The ships come sailing in loaded with liquor. Uncle Sam says that the next step may be confiscation of the ship. The law allows it. England is outraged at the suggestion. But when a German ship carried contraband liquor that had paid no British taxes into the British three-mile limit, that ship was seized, heavily fined and its cargo confiscated. There is a theory across the ocean that England and some other countries may do things that the United States mustn't do. It's an inaccurate theory.

We own the waters within three miles of our coast. Those waters are a part of our national home and the nation has a right to decide what may enter its house. Nevertheless it is impolite and impolitic unwise to unite all the nations in thoroughly justified protest and in just dislike of us.

What they do or drink at sea does not interfere with our prohibition any more than Turkish polygamy interferes with our virtue. The president should find a way out of this foolish situation. If the idea is to help our shipping, which must be dry, then making this nation ridiculous is too big a price to pay for doubtful help.

President Harding says that in the next war dollars as well as men will be drafted. John M. Baer, cartoonist, who used to be farmer-congressman from North Dakota, publishes in the soldiers' paper, "Stars and Stripes," a cartoon asking the president why he doesn't conscript a few dollars now to pay the soldiers' part of what they lost in the great war? It's a timely question. The president's reply would be that he believes the soldiers bonus will pass without any doubt, at the beginning of the next congress.

Terrific Storm Strikes Omaha; Damage Heavy

hole and, at times, squirted six to eight feet in the air. All streets on hill turned to miniature rivers as the storm progressed.

The storm struck with all its fury in Fairacres. Two electric line poles were blown down in front of the homes of J. L. Kennedy and George Brandeis.

Drive Cars Into Yard.
The wires were in the street and threatened traffic to such an extent that motorists turned out of the street at the Morris Miller home and drove over the lawn until they passed the danger.

From Forty-ninth to Fifty-sixth streets on Dodge street the water backed from the drains and formed a miniature lake. The water was so deep that traffic had to turn to other streets and drive around.

In Fairacres several automobiles were abandoned. Unfortunate motorists who did not have side curtains on their cars were drenched.

Hail Makes Big Dents.
A. W. Thompson, 546 South Thirtieth street, reported that hail tore holes in screens in his neighborhood large enough for a man to stick his fist through. Wires were down in all parts of town, as were trees. Persons living along paved streets turned out to drag limbs of trees and electric wires out of the way so automobiles could pass.

Trees and poles opposite the Field club are sagging. Heavy damage was done to fruit trees by the hail. On many farms near the city the fruit was torn from trees.

Chimneys in many parts of the city were blown down.

Falls City reported a torrential downpour accompanied by high winds and lightning. Precipitation amounted to 1.41 inches. Telephone communication with Lincoln, Omaha and Kansas City was severed. Beatrice reported rains Tuesday night.

During the 24-hour period ending at 7 Wednesday evening .37 inches of rain fell in Omaha.

Beatrice Hen Settles Ancient Dispute by Laying 2 Eggs in Day
Beatrice, Neb., June 27.—Here's one for Nebraska poultry fanciers: Mrs. D. B. Nestlerode, Beatrice, has a hen which has usurped the place formerly held by the pet dog in the affections of the household. And biddy has reciprocated by becoming attached to different members of the family herself. Recently she has made it a point to come into the house each day to lay an egg.

Yesterday morning she appeared at the rear door and was admitted. She laid an egg. At 6 in the evening she was at the door again. Mrs. Nestlerode opened the door and Biddy was soon cackling over another egg.

It was a normal specimen weighing within a fraction of an ounce of her morning contribution to the family larder. Mrs. Nestlerode is convinced that the ancient argument over two eggs a day from one hen is forever settled.

They appeared at police station yesterday morning to seek aid of police. They are Mrs. Mabel Dennis, 2444 Larimore avenue, and Mrs. Hertha Elliott, 3411 Ames avenue, nieces.

They questioned everyone who entered the house following their aunt's death. The woman left a bank account of more than $2,000.

Board Likely to Recheck All Tax Schedules Here

Briggs Says He Will Live Up to Campaign Promises—South Omaha Levies Higher.

Members of the board of equalization have agreed almost unanimously to check every personal property schedule in Greater Omaha.

This action comes as a result of checking the schedules of various wealthy Dundee citizens.

"I for one, will urge a recheck of the entire city, to show the citizens the difference in personal assessments," said John Briggs. "I have talked with other members and they, too, are considering it."

"I pledged the voters last fall during my campaign that I would levy a tax that was just and equitable, and I am here to make that pledge good."

"You can run through every schedule and find that there are discrepancies that should be made public. Compare Dundee schedules with those of South Omaha, packing house employes and you will find a number of the South Omahans paying a larger tax."

"Ten persons living in Dundee who read of the board's raises in the newspapers Tuesday appeared at the court house yesterday."

Pair Deny Robbing Banks in Nebraska

Lincoln, June 27.—George Wright, 27, and Ray Sawyer, 23, both claiming to be from California, denied yesterday they were implicated in bank robberies in the state with which they are charged. They were brought here by Sheriff Kinnald of Pierce county, who captured them in northeast Nebraska shortly after they had survived an automobile accident which a companion, George Sidles, was killed.

The two suspects were taken before State Sheriff Carroll and a number of peace officers from different counties in the state. Officers from Franklin county identified the two as the men who abandoned at Franklin an automobile containing stolen plunder, dynamite and burglar tools. State Sheriff Carroll said in his opinion the identification is complete.

The suspects are accused of participation in robbery of banks at Grafton, Roseland and Norman. Decision had not been reached tonight as to what action will be taken against them.
