

Padlocks on 100 Homes in Omaha Sought

U. S. Attorney and Booze Agents Making List Against Which Injunctions Will Be Asked.

District Attorney J. C. Kinsler announced yesterday that applications will be made immediately for injunctions putting padlocks on nearly 100 homes in Omaha where convictions have been obtained on charges of selling booze.

"We contend, the same as Judge Ferris of the Missouri district, that any house where booze is sold becomes a 'shop,'" said Kinsler, "and we will ask immediately for injunctions ordering the places named to be closed for one year under the prohibition enforcement laws.

"Just because a man has a bed and a table in a place doesn't make it a home if he sells in the house. Then it becomes a shop."

No Tyranny Planned.

District Attorney Kinsler said that according to Judge Ferris' opinion a bakery shop could be a house where bread is baked and sold. "In the same way a house is a 'liquor shop' where the wheat and the rye and the barley are made into liquor instead of bread," Judge Ferris brought out in his opinion.

Kinsler said he is not aiming to be a tyrant or a persecutor, but he is going to make it "as tough as possible" for every one who violates the federal laws.

"We hope to close about 100 houses for a year the same as we slapped the padlock on more than 50 buildings last year," said Kinsler.

Whole Families Fined.

Bootleggers who sought mercy by entering pleas of guilty in federal court were handed two-listed wallpops by Federal Judge Woodrugh.

Husbands and wives, charged jointly with bootlegging, were given jail sentences.

Whole families were assessed heavy fines.

Second offenders will spend the rest of the summer days behind the bars of the county jail.

Philip C. Lynch, brother of the former county commissioner, John Lynch, was one who sought clemency by admitting guilt. He got 30 days. He was charged with illegal sale and possession.

Carl and Nuncia DeMarco, husband and wife, "second offenders," will serve 30 days each in the county jail and pay $200 each to get out.

They will occupy separate cells.

Husbands and Wives.

Mr. and Mrs. Sebastiano Ingalaia were also given 30 days and fined $100 each. Mr. and Mrs. Frank Sawicki were new to the bootlegging business, they told the judge. Judge Woodrugh sentenced Frank to 15 days in jail. The wife was fined $100.

"Let me serve instead of my husband," she pleaded with Woodrugh.

Judge Woodrugh said he didn't mind. By late afternoon, as the temperature rose, Mrs. Sawicki changed her mind. Her husband took the jail sentence.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred H. Sperry were fined $100. It was their first offense.

Charles Gemma and his wife, Mary, weren't so fortunate. They received a jail sentence of 15 days and $100 fine, respectively.

Whole Family Guilty.

The Cocco family of four were found guilty of bootlegging. The father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cocco, were fined $100 each. The son, Sebastiano, was given a 15-day jail sentence and the daughter, Rose, was fined $100.

Lydia Ulrich, who unknowingly "bleeded out" one of the federal agents for being a "tin horn sport," because he only spent $4 for booze, was given a 10-day sentence and a $200 fine. "I have men spend as high as $200 in my place in one night," she told the federal agent as he posed as a poor workman.

Retired Farmer Fined.

Charles W. Willis, the retired farmer from Los Angeles, who was arrested by Samardick's crew, was fined $200.

Karen Camel, a druggist at 1124 South Thirteenth street, was fined $500 on an illegal possession and sale charge.

Thomas King, the Americanized son of a son of a man named Sady Tady, who was also arrested, was sentenced to serve 15 days. His father was fined $100. They had a difficult time explaining the family relationship to the judge, since their names were so different.

Others Sentenced.

Others fined and sentenced to jail were:

Rose Teichmeyer, $200; John Swartzel, $200; Pete Plechas, $250; Dan McNulty, $250; Morris Shapiro, $200; Steve Moller, $200; Tony Pilgr, 10 days; Rose Pilgr, $100; Thomas King, 15 days; W. J. Furlong, $200; George C. Oakley, $200; George S. Tobin, a cripple, $150; Frank Vanick, $250; Joe Stanzia, $250; Mary Peitryka, $100; Ignatz Gladinsky, $100; Josephine Prinsanis, $100; Sam Gampo, 30 days; Phillip Groll, 30 days; Joe Filippo, 15 days and $100 fine; John Surra, 15 days and $100 fine; John Lewis, 15 days; Louisa Marie, $100; Camella Grandenette, 30 days and $200 fine. Grandenette was a second offender.
