North Dakota Senator Alleges Speculators Drove Rates Down in Retaliation for Control Legislation.

Washington, July 22.-The fall in wheat prices during recent months grain specultors in retaliation for the regulation of the grain exchanges by congress, in a letter by Senator Ladd, republican, North Dakota, on the eve of his departure for Europe, and made public today at his office here.

"Nine days after the regulatory leg islation became effective," the senator asserted, "the wheat market started to slide, and since that time there has been a steady decrease."

"For 30 years," he continued, "the speculators successfully fought legislation that would curb their activities. Now, finally this new law with a few teeth in it is proving to be annoying and they inaugurated a period of strict discipline for the wheat farmer and the farm bloc in congress by which discipline they hope eventually to convince the wheat grower that he was all wrong in demanding legisla-tion which curbed their power and that he must come back and ask congress to repeal this annoying measure, take the teeth from the law and trust to the generous mercies of the wheat

"Their system has worked very cleverly during the last three months in driving down the price of wheat by means of heavy short selling. The propaganda has been clever and the consistent crop estimates, weather reports, foreign supply and demand nomestic needs, possibilities of a tre-mendous surplus in the growing crop. all have been cleverly used to force the natural buyer out of the market in the belief that he would eventual ly buy at a lower price."

"R. M'ALPINE, Capt."

Neale read it over and over, stupidly at first and then with growing excitement. Alone in the tent, he allowed a broad, childish, unrestrained smile of pure pleasure and pride to shine all over his face.

Then the date struck his eye. He was to report on September first and this was August 24. Gosh! Less than a week to get into condition! Not a single minute to lose. His chance might depend on his being in condition.

But apparently it had occurred to her, for when she felt on her lips the cool, fresh, boyish, matter-of-fact pressure of his lips, she gave a sob and flung her arms around him, holding him close and crying a little on his shoulder.

Why, dear old mother! What was the matter with her? Neale put both arms around her and gave her a great hug, as he used to do when he came home from West Adams.

Still in his football togs, just as he had danced the last waltz, he set off for the first of his training, a two-mile jog-trot over the hills.

CHAPTER XXVI. There were horribly emotional ups and downs in the junior football season for Neale, ups and downs that ploughed and harrowed his young soul, planted many seeds in his heart, and left him at the end of the season with so much new knowledge of himwith so much new knowledge of him-self and others to digest, with ex-periences so rich and varied, dark and brilliant, to look back on, that he needed the entire rest of the year to grow up to them. The other students, those who did not play football, seemed to him like little boys, footing around with marbles and kites, so little did they know of the black depths of depression and despair, and he hard won heights of exultation which crammed his own personal life getting the genuine Bayer product full, and gave him a premature ma-turity of experience, like that of a boy who has been through a war.

The day after his third game on the varsity, father called him on the telephone and asked him if he couldn't come home and have dinner with them to celebrate his success—would that be breaking training? Oh, Ruling on Oil Case no. Neale answered, not if he got back to the house at 9. So he went home to a specially good dinner, just the kind he remembered as a little boy, when there was company. They talked football mostly; that meant he
