White Collar Beggar

He had only a few cents in his pocket and he was hungry. He asked the girl to buy him a meal in the fashionable hotel cafe, and she did. Whereupon, naturally, came the spirit of romance to keep them company at her table for two and make possible one of the most delightful short stories Henry Hall has ever written. You will find it in the magazine section of The Sunday Bee.

Broke, but a Gentleman

Count Leo Istillo Ramloff hasn't a dime in his pockets and he's fast growing frightfully baggy about the knees, but he's still the monarch of all he surveys. A true story of life as it is today. In the magazine section of The Sunday Bee.

Successful Dumbbells

"Beautiful, but dumb." How often have you heard that expression? It's a blessing in disguise to be called stupid, according to O. O. McIntyre, who cites as examples Henry Ford, Charles Schwab, Harold Bell Wright, Owen Davis, H. B. Marinelli and others, including Billy from his old home town, a slightly cracked youth, so the villagers said, but who now is the leader of a jazz band troupe and earns nearly $1,000 a week. In the magazine section of The Sunday Bee.

Flappers Too Frank

That's the attitude of the pretty Chinese maid who has come to America to study banking. But while the flapper may be a little bit shocking, she has a wholesome admiration for American girls as a whole. In the magazine section of The Sunday Bee.

Midget Newlyweds

Just like Gulliver's Lilliputians in giant land, the midget newlyweds meet many queer difficulties in adjusting themselves into a world where almost everybody is nearly twice as large as they. A full page illustrated story in the magazine section of The Sunday Bee.

Raising Families

What to do with the children is becoming the big problem of the age, says Abe Martin. And here is one time when Abe hasn't any ideas for a solution. He merely hopes that a good workable plan will evolve itself eventually. Three hundred words, almost as many laughs. In the magazine section of The Sunday Bee.

Books for Children

Careful parents realize that much thought should be put in on the books their children should be allowed to read. But it becomes a simple matter for readers of The Sunday Bee. Each week in "Happiland," the special department for children, there is printed a list of books selected by Alice M. Jordan, supervisor of children's work, Boston public library. You may be sure that the books she recommends are the proper books for your children to read. You will find "Happiland" in the magazine section of The Sunday Bee.

San Francisco Pastor Delivers Prayer Over Body of Late President

San Francisco, Aug. 3.—The Rev. James S. West, pastor of the First Baptist church of San Francisco, delivered the following prayer at the services for President Harding here today.

Almighty God, our Heavenly Father, Thou art the Supreme Ruler of the nation and of the world, the Loving Heavenly Father of all Thy children, almighty in Thy strength and infinite in Thy tenderness.

We approach Thee humbly and reverently but boldly and expectantly in this hour when our hearts are wrung with sorrow, the nation is bowed in grief and the eyes and heart-sympathies of the world are turned toward this place.

The great and beloved chief magistrate of our nation has suddenly fallen at the moment when we most brightly hoped that our earnest prayers for his speedy and complete recovery were being graciously answered, when his great work, as it seemed to us, had only well begun.

Our hope is in Thee, and Thee only. We humbly beseech Thee that Thine infinite grace and comfort may be bestowed upon us abundantly in this hour of our supreme need, as individuals and as a nation.

We thank Thee out of the depths of our hearts for the noble, Christian character, lofty principles, and notable service of him whom Thou has called from sacrificial service to rest eternal. We bless Thee for his unshrinking courage, his stalwart strength, his radiant kindness and gentleness, for his self-getting devotion to the cause of justice, brotherhood and peace for the individual, the nation and the world, in the propagation of which he sacrificed his life and as a martyr to which he is lovingly enshrined forever in the hearts of the grief-stricken but grateful people.

We fondly hope and earnestly pray that what he wished and sought to accomplish by his life may now be accomplished by his death. Raise up others, we beseech Thee, who shall carry forward and complete the great work which he began.

We beseech Thee to bless with wisdom, poise and strength, all those who were associated with him in the great affairs of the nation, and upon whom with his going there rests so great a burden of responsibility.

"We beseech Thee, especially, to bless him, who, by this providence, is called to the chief magistracy of the republic.

Let Thy tenderest benediction of comfort and sustaining grace be upon members of the stricken family, his aged father, his brother and sisters, and especially upon his faithful, devoted wife, and helpmeet. Comfort her with the hope of eternal life, and according to her great need be Thou her sufficiency day by day until that bright morning dawn when she shall see again the face of him whom she has loved long since and lost a while.

We make this petition for Thy rich benediction upon the nation and the world in the name of Him who is the resurrection and the life, Jesus Christ, our Lord and Savior.

France Loses Friend in Death of Harding

Paris, Aug. 3.—President Harding's death is taken in France as an event of first importance. It even has placed the grave political crisis, which may lead to an end of the entente, in the background for the time being.

The president of the republic and other officials and public bodies today transmitted expressions of sympathy to Mrs. Harding and to the United States. If the message there was evinced a realization that France has lost a true friend.

"A man who commanded respect and a perfectly upright man," was the phrase used by one of the editorial writers in an afternoon paper, and similar words of import were to be found in each column of newspapers touching on the death of the American chief executive.
