

Guards Begin Drills at Camp Near Ashland

Major-General Duncan and Governor Bryan, With Staffs, Expected to Visit Citizen Soldiers.

Ashland, Neb., Aug. 7.—Regular drill began for the members of the Nebraska National guard who are attending the annual encampment here today, although nearly all were present yesterday, which was the official opening day of the encampment. The work of getting the men assigned to their various quarters and of erecting tents took up the major portion of the day yesterday.

The drill program begins with close order work, squad formation, then platoon and company drill. After this will come the extended order drill, skirmishing, battalion drill, followed by regimental drill and maneuvers. The smaller units are worked with at first in order to let the men become accustomed to the camp and the work, gradually extending the scope of the drill until whole regiments are included in single drills.

Rain of the last few days made the ground muddy in places, but when the tents were erected the entire camp found adequate shelter against possible future rainfall, and the board floors gave as much protection from the damp ground as would houses.

Major Gen. George B. Duncan, commanding the Seventh corps area of the regular army, with headquarters at Omaha, is expected to bring his staff and visit the camp during the next few days. A smoker and mixer for officers has been arranged for the occasion.

One day will be set aside as governor's day, when Governor Bryan is expected to visit the camp and inspect it and review the troops. The governor's staff will accompany him on the trip.

Athletics will be featured during the encampment, and inter-company contests will be staged almost daily. Baseball, football and other sports will have prominent places on the program.

The camp has attracted numerous motorists, as the camp is just north of the D. L. D. highway and hundreds of persons travel along this route daily. Many of them stop for an hour or more to observe the guardsmen at work or at play.

Restrain Sheriff

Lincoln, Aug. 7.—Federal District Judge Munger Monday granted a temporary order restraining the sheriff of Boyd county from proceeding on a distress warrant to collect taxes from the closed First National bank of Spencer.

The petition for a restraining order was brought in behalf of George Cronkleton, receiver of the bank. Boyd county authorities assessed $4,000 personal tax against the bank prior to the closing, and when collection failed after it had closed its doors a distress warrant was issued. Receiver Cronkleton takes the stand that such a levy is unlawful when it proceeds against a receiver. The action is the first of the kind ever raised in Nebraska.

CANTINE
"The Hard Soft-Coal"

"Cheap" coal goes right from the mine to the consumer, with practically no preparation. You pay freight on every pound of slate and rock in it—you pay hauling charges—you lose the heat value of just that much coal—you increase your ashes—it's costly to buy a cheap product. CANTINE Coal has all rock, slate and dirt removed at the mine—by mechanical double-screening and careful hand-picking over steel belts—comes evenly sized, hard and clean, and stays that way. Its price is really quite moderate, considering the quality of the coal.
