WHAT more exquisite entertainment for the drama-goer could be devised than the spectacle of such adult performers as Miss Lynn Fontanne, Henry Hull and Ralph Morgan romping about in the dubious ecstasies of puppy love? So proficiently does this trio of artists exhibit the pretty tricks of childhood in "In Love With Love," that one almost desires to see it in a revival of Mr. Tarkington's "Penrod." There they go, scampering across the stage, now petting, now scratching one another, and giving vent to cunning little noises, now amorous, now petulant. Mr. Hull, the hero of scores of mature romances, is the nimblest of the participants in this emotional frolic. He and his passions are almost larva-like in their earliness, except when he is displayed in the second act in a boyish fist-fight with another lad, both being knocked out. You know the kind of fist-fight it is. "I dare you to shove me again!" "I can lick you with one hand tied behind my back!" etc. It is something like a grownup little girl and boy-land, with, however, occasional lapses into senility. One of the dramatic critics, writing of "In Love With Love," complained of an absence of left from the dialogue. He evidently did not overhear Mr. Robert Strang, as a bullying boy broker, utter an elderly threat against Mr. Hull, his opponent for Miss Fontanne's favors. "I could kill you," he said, "and go to the chair with a smile!"

starting rapidly. She slips from Mr. Hull's impetuous arms into the less thrilling embrace of Mr. Strang, and perhaps back again, returning after a brief period to Mr. Strang. She leaves her betrothal lying about so carelessly that she finds it difficult for the moment to tell just where they are. Diagnosing herself, she discovers that she is in love with love, rather than with lovers—a mysterious ailment somewhat similar to that suffered by ladies afflicted with flirtatiousness. Says she to herself: How many times do I love, again? Tell me how many beads there are in a silver chain of evening rain. Unraveled from the trembling main. And threading the eye of a yellow star. So many times do I love again!

It is, as the saying goes, pleasant to note that in the last scene Miss Fontanne succumbs to the stable charms of Mr. Ralph Morgan as an earnest young bridge builder; and she indicates that he will be, if not her final destination, at least an important point in her itinerary. Miss Fontanne as the irresolute ingenue, is a lovely and quiet excitement. Delightfully infected with some of the reckless manners of Miss Laurette Taylor, her every skillful accent and movement evokes from the audience loud evidences of appreciation. On the first night, for instance, she skipped up some stairs so cutely that the cold and critical assemblage of Broadway drama-lovers was moved to demand that she do it again, which she did. It is a good show, as good shows go, and, while legitimately censuring the more thoughtless of the playgoers, it also contains food for those who think deeply of life among the women. It is a study of gender rather than sex. We may learn again from Miss Fontanne's performance that it was woman who betrayed the capitol, who lost Mark Antony the world, who was the cause of a long 10 years' war, and laid at last old Troy in ashes, without, however, deliberately intending to do so. "In Love With Love," by the way, is a product of Vincent Laurence, author of "Two Fellows and a Girl," another Broadway triumph, which is described as the best of the sweetheart plays.

What the World Offers

Sliding Billy Watson on His Way to Open New Gayety Season

For many, many seasons that funny little comedian, "Sliding" Billy Watson, has been slipping around the big Columbia circuit of 38 weeks time in the big cities of this country, embracing the metropolitan cities from Omaha to Boston and from Montreal to St. Louis, all of which was done to the plaudits of millions of people who have laughed and still laugh over the funny little slide of which the diminutive Billy is the originator.

But now comes into the sweet young life of "Sliding Billy" the most severe test of all for his slippery feet: Old Man Johnson, manager of the popular Gayety, received a wire yesterday to the effect that Sliding Billy and his company had been selected to open the local Gayety's current season on Saturday afternoon, August 25, and to make the good news more interesting Billy also wired that he intended to slide all the way from New York to Omaha.

Appropos to the mention of Sliding Billy and the novel feat (and novel feat, too) he has cut out for himself, the list of bookings at the Gayety for the coming season embrace the greatest array of new titles or attractions that the circuit has offered since its conception 21 years ago, the new shows including "Nifties of 1924," "Jig Time," "All in Fun," "Monkey Shines," "Bathing Beauty," "Breezy Times," "Record Breakers," "Queens of Paris," "Runnin' Wild," "Dancin' Around," "Vanties," "Temptations of 1923," "All Aboard," "Happy-Go-Lucky," "Happy Days," "Hollywood Follies." Aside from the above listed 15 shows which have never been seen in Omaha, the remaining 23 attractions will be found to be the cream of last season's excellent line of productions, all of which will be still further enlarged and embellished, thus assuring lovers of clean, wholesome musical burlesk the very finest line of attractions that were ever sponsored by and offered under the banner of the mighty Columbia Amusement company.

"The motion picture field is not crowded with original stories. In fact, there is more room in our industry at present for new ideas and interesting material than ever before." This is the observation made by Milton E. Hoffman, production manager for the Metro studios, on his return to Hollywood from New York, where he combed the field for screen material.

"The majority of writers do not take the motion picture business seriously," he said. "They merely write without studying our needs. The successful writer is the individual who studies our field carefully."

Lake Manawa Water Receives O. K. by Chemist

At the request of the management at Lake Manawa park, City Chemist Joseph B. Thornell of Council Bluffs has just completed an analysis of the water in the lake, pronouncing it splendid for bathing. As a result of the recent heavy rains, as well as from the heavy rains earlier in the season, Lake Manawa has maintained a high level of water all summer. In the opinion of Manager F. B. Stewart, based upon the report of the city chemist, the lake is ideal for bathing this summer and particularly inviting just at this time for the throngs of bathers that may be expected during the remainder of the season.

Every warm day sees crowds of bathers at Manawa beach, from the early morning when the cottagers arrive for their refreshing dips, until the evening crowds arrive with their swimming parties, among which are frequently some expert swimming and diving demonstrators.

The largest motion picture theater in England, built on an American design, is to be opened soon in London. The amusement house will seat 2,400.
