Husband's Salary $22 a Week--Family of Four Live on 50 Cents a Day

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I am a constant reader of your column, but never have written. I thought I would drop you a short letter for young housewives to save and be happy.

As I am only 20 and have two small babies, one a boy, and a girl. My girl is 4, my boy 1. Have been married over five years. My husband also is only 20. He makes $22 a week. We have saved $1,400 in our five years of married life...

Well, Miss Fairfax, you will throw this in the basket perhaps, but I wish to see this in print, if it is not too long.

Y. S.: Please excuse this pencil tablet paper, as it is all I have at present. You are a most remarkable and unusual young woman to say the least.

Things can't begin coming your way, my dear, until you invite them a bit more cordially. Happiness isn't a matter of what happens to us. It does not depend on circumstances nor yet on fortune.

It isn't easy to control our thoughts. It is easy to let morbid fancies run away with us. But most of the things over which we agonize are only fancies.

Undecided: Under the circumstances I most certainly advise them to marry. However I would not keep the marriage secret. As long as the parents have no objection to the marriage it is far better to tell them.

Why Not Be Happy? Dear Miss Fairfax: I'm the most miserable girl in the world. Nothing ever comes my way. I see other folks having friends and good times and luck—but I'm doomed to misery.

It is just as easy to believe in our good fortune as in our ill luck. It is possible to be so sure of success that it becomes real.

Junior was still peacefully sleeping on the couch by the fire, and after I went on into the dining room, where the Ticeers, father, mother and son were just finishing the dessert of the dinner, which Katie had prepared.

It is a good thing that you are not a miser. I am a miser. I have a miserly habit of saving money. I don't see anything in spending money on shows, dances or parties. I don't see anything in spending money on foolishness.

Discouragement, despair, horror and all mental. Fear is our worst enemy. And the minute we stop being afraid and feel confident of fortune and happiness, that minute we are happy—whether or not an actual cause for happiness is ours.

dinner back." Mrs. Ticer said apologetically as we entered the dining room, "but Mrs. Graham and Mrs. Bickett would have it that we sit down and eat first."

"They were perfectly right," my mother-in-law responded graciously, and I saw that the good humor into which my appeal for advice had put her was bomb-proof.

"I take off my sunbonnet to dot Miss Bickett," Katie said in a whisper which was nearer a shout as she halted by her side.

"Desperation," Katherine rejoined smiling. "I'm fond of chicken and biscuit myself. Hish! Here come the Ticeers."

I headed the whispered warning promptly and swung away from the stove as our neighbors fled out—the head of the family engaged with a toothpick, regardless of the surreptitious elbow jabs which I saw his wife give him.

"We'll just run along now," Mrs. Ticer said briskly. "I'll have your uniforms for you tomorrow, sure."

She turned to Katherine, "and I'll be over here—what time?" Her eyes focussed tactfully upon a point between my mother-in-law and me, giving the effect of speaking to both of us.

"As early as you can," my mother-in-law responded promptly. "We'll be ready to start in here any time."

"I'll be here at 8 o'clock, then," Mrs. Ticer replied with equal promptness, and Mother Graham's face beamed at the assurance, while I privately wondered how even our energetic neighbor was going to manage her own work and Katherine's uniforms and be on hand at the hour she had specified.

But that she would accomplish everything she had set out to do, I was sure, knowing Mrs. Ticer's efficiency of god. And then she and her husband and the widely-grinning Jerry finally managed to get them selves on the other side of the door—leave-taking is an awkward ordeal for the Ticeers—and Katie, suddenly resuming the reins of culinary authority unceremoniously shoved Katherine and me from her domain.

"Me, I fear now," she assured us cheerily. "Ladies only in my way."

She grinned impudently at us, and as Mother Graham was already in the dining room, we returned her grimace as impudently, feeling safe from a lecture upon the proper discipline for servants.

"I'm glad you feel that way, Katie," Katherine assured her, "for I'm mighty glad to sit down and be waited on, but you must be tired to death."

"Dees here work nodings but play," Katie retorted, "but oop stairs! Oh, my golly!"

I bolted out of the kitchen, drawing Katherine with me, for Katie's confidences are never low-toned. Mother Graham was already seated at the head of the table, and bore all the earmarks of impatient waiting. I knew that she was hungry and, indeed, was surprised that she had not exhibited impatience before.

"I should think we'd waited long enough, Margaret," she remarked acidly, "without your dawdling around that kitchen any longer. As it is, I'll venture we don't get through our dinner before that mess across the roof sends for you."

I smiled at her prophecy, but Katie had but just brought on the dessert when the doorbell rang peremptorily.

EN-AR-CO Motor Oil EN-AR-CO Gear Compound For Transmissions and Differentials THE HEIR CAUSES MANY A BALD HEAD WHITE ROSE GASOLINE LOOK FOR THIS SIGN En-ar-co Motor Oil Is Real Lubrication Here's Why—All refiners make lubricants just as all cooks make biscuits, yet there is as much difference in oils as there is between the delicious light, flaky biscuits mother makes and heavy, soggy apologies for biscuits some restaurants serve. In each case the raw materials are practically the same, but the "making" is different. In making En-ar-co Oils we average over a million tests a year. It is only by this multiplying of tests that perfect products can be made. This thoroughness in our Scientific Refining process is the protection offered to users of our products. Your motor will run better and last longer if the Lubricating Oil is taken out every 500 miles and fresh oil put in.
