

Officer Nabs Prowler n Fight in Home

Prisoner Tells Captain He Could Have Slain Patrolman But for Belief in Hereafter.

Patrolman Charles Padget, thanks to the belief of a burglar in the "hereafter," was alive yesterday after a thrilling experience when he awoke early this morning to find a prowler ransacking his house.

After the night's work had ended Padget went to his home and retired at once. A few hours later he was awakened by a noise in the hallway outside his bedroom door. He sat up in bed and beheld, outlined by the hall light, the figure of a man.

Battle Is On. Padget leaped for the figure and a battle started. The burglar was armed with a revolver and he first attempted to intimidate the officer with this. Padget was too excited to pay attention and rushed at him.

The burglar seized Padget roughly by the shoulders and forced him across the room, sat him in a rocking chair and then tipped chair and man over backward. Padget fell sprawling to the floor and before he could regain his feet the prowler had planted a foot in his mouth.

Padget could not call for assistance, but other members of the household were aroused by the scuffle and came to his assistance. They overpowered the intruder and called police.

Believes in Hereafter. At the police station the man gave the name of Charles Mallard and said that he lived in Aurora, Ill. "I have been prowling houses for four years," he told Captain Allen, "and I never got caught before. I wouldn't shoot that fellow, and I could have done it, because I believe in a hereafter and I am going there. I don't want to be barred because I committed murder."

From the story he told the captain the officer was fully one minute getting from his bed to the hallway and was in plain sight all the time. Mallard is being held for further investigation. Mallard this morning declared his right name is Charles Currey. Police found a police revolver on the man which they believe may have been taken from a railroad special agent.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. MINTYRE.
New York, Aug. 23.—At midnight on Saturday the electric sign changers begin the work of changing the dazzling displays in front of the Broadway movie houses and vaudeville theaters. There is an eager rush about their work.

The testing time is about two hours later when the new signs are flashed on and off. It is always a great moment for vaudeville "piffawmers" and they line along the fiery gulch to see if their names leap forth in blazing lights.

Around the corner from Times square is the N. A. A. club and on Saturday night the actors and actresses gather for the first lap of their holiday which lasts until the Monday matinee. Vaudeville folk are the most democratic of all stage people.

The lowly jugglers and acrobats are just as popular as head liners. They have the spirit of true comradeship—the animating quality that makes the life of circus people so happy. Most of them are whimsical romanticists, unmindful of the tomorrows.

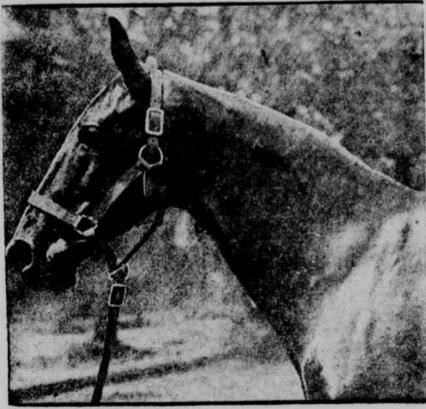

Being Scotch, an inverse ratio reasoning warns me to profanity. The vaudeville performer who lives up to his last penny during the winter and arrives at the summer hiatus with a smile and cheer wins my profound respect. I'd like to be free from worry about tomorrows.

There are hundreds of them now sunning themselves along Broadway curbs. They breakfast on "coffee and sinkers" and a few cut their own hair in skylight hall rooms, but they bugle their faith in the future. The world is their oyster.

They might not have the price of an evening dinner, but just the same they are spending huge offers from Dave, Lee, Jake and Flo. They will go far for friends.

The world at large knew little of Morris Rosenfeld, the east side bard of the sweatshops and tenements. But when he passed away the east side mourned as one and followed him in tears to his grave. He told in elegiacs of the intolerable conditions. In his lyrics he wove the poignant tragedy of life. He knew the palefaced men of the sweatshops who spent entire lives sewing and sewing and his heart overflowed with sympathy for them.

Humor is at low tide in New York theaters. Comedians are resorting to puerile smut. They do not mince. They let go with both barrels. Some of the wheezes of the musical reviews are more than Rabelaisian gags. They are simply unprintable. Gallagher and Shean, trick comics, suddenly elevated, are singing doggerel that would bring blushes in honky-tonks. The estimable Eddie Cantor is not far behind. All of these men are clever and funny and have no need to dip into the gutters. Another excuse for the suggestive is the "tableaux." In one, skimpily brassieres are the only covering for nudes and in another four press agented beauties are entirely nude save for a single whisp of tulle. The vice crusaders appear to be on a vacation.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Shelhorn have returned to Council Bluffs from France with a tale of hard times in that country. Mr. Shelhorn is a veteran of the world war and his wife is a native of France. They left Council Bluffs, June 29, and sailed to Europe on the "Roosevelt."

They planned on the possibility of settling in France, but decided in favor of Council Bluffs when they found times so "dull." They were astonished at the reconstruction progress made by the French, however.

Nebraskan Hurt in Train Wreck
Maple Lake, Minn., Aug. 23.—Nineteen persons were injured, one seriously, and three Pullmans and an observation on the Winnipeg flyer of the Minneapolis, St. Paul & Sault Ste. Marie railway were derailed and toppled into a ditch near here early Wednesday night.

Mrs. B. F. Scoggin of Oak, Neb., was seriously injured, suffering a depression of the skull, and two other persons were painfully hurt.

Victims of the wreck, which occurred four miles east of here, were brought to Annandale and given surgical treatment at the railroad station, where that part of the train, still intact, was turned into a temporary hospital. The injured included: Mrs. Lewis Hansen, Davenport, Ia.; Mrs. John Rohlf, Davenport, Ia.; E. W. Kildt, Davenport, Ia.; and Elmer Kleider, McCausland, Ia.

$25 Out
An Omahan hired a taxicab to go to Council Bluffs.

Council Bluffs police arrested his driver for speeding on Broadway. The Omahan put up $25 so that the driver could return to Omaha and get money for bond. The driver didn't return.

Pet Dog Stolen.
Charles O'Neill, 2440 Avenue G, told police two men drove up and stole his pet fox terrier dog last night.

Auto Stolen
O. N. Hayward, Kirkman, Ia., reported to police that his automobile was stolen from 338 West Broadway last night.

Woodrough and Bailiff Brooklyn Bridge Was Hiking Ground Return from New York

Federal Judge Woodrough and his faithful bailiff, Anton Gross, returned from Brooklyn, N. Y., where the judge has been presiding over federal court for a month.

The judge will not begin active work here until September 1 and is spending time rusticating at his Ralston home and engaging in his favorite hobbies of woodchopping and walking.

Anton is enthusiastic about New York. "Court only from 10:30 to 12:30 and from 2 to 4," he said. "Then we would walk over the bridge and up to our hotel."

"One day we walked to Coney Island. Then we took a boat back to 129th street and walked down to Forty-second street. It was played out. I said to the judge, 'We are the only fools walking.' He just said, 'There have to be some fools in the world.' It was 13 miles we walked that day. It's too much, too much."

Police Seeking Two Women in Kidnaping Case

No Trace Discovered of 3-Months-Old Lillian McKenzie, Stolen from Baby Carriage Last Saturday.

New York, Aug. 23.—Two women are sought by detectives searching for 3-months-old Lillian McKenzie, kidnaped from her carriage on a Manhattan street last Saturday.

One of the women sought is a beggar. On Saturday she visited a number of houses in Manhattan's lower west side, a crying baby in her arms, seeking money.

The other woman is the childless wife of a man whose fondness for children made him desert her because there was none in his home.

Since the kidnaping she has visited her former home seeking her husband. She is said to have told neighbors that she has a baby now and "they can't take it away from me."

Driver Hits Boy Riding Bicycle

R. E. Cole, 2715 Pacific street, appeared at Central police station shortly before noon today, and said that while driving a truck for the Duplex Manufacturing company on Sixteenth street, between Nicholas and Izard streets, his truck ran down a small boy.

"The boy was on a bicycle and was holding on behind another truck which was in front of me," related Cole. "The other truck stopped and when it started again the boy seemed to lose his balance. He fell under the wheels of my truck. A man in a car drove up and said he would take the boy to the police station."

The injured boy had not been brought to the station, however, and hospital said they had no such accident case.

Model of Aquila Court on Display

Tiny Design Shows Exact Features of New Structure When Completed.

A model of "Aquila Court," true in every respect to the building as it will look when finished at Sixteenth and Howard streets, lies in the office of Edwin S. Jewell, manager of the structure, 901 City National bank building. The model is four feet long and two and a half feet wide.

According to Edwin S. Jewell, manager of the structure, the facade is of the type of governmental architecture noted in Vienna. The old idea of the packing-box plan, of office building is forgotten. A Latin air is created by the balconies and small windows.

"Aquila Court," which is being erected by Raymond and Chester Cook, the third generation of a family of real estate men in Chicago, is their first venture in the building line.

The court, to the rear of the L. of four stories, the long side of which fronts on Howard street, is placed where, as a rule, are seen old boxes, rubbish and trash. This spot is transformed into a Spanish patio with cloister walks on both sides, lighted overhead. Bracket lights will be suspended from the pillars of the arches of the cloister and will be of amber shade. A tiny lagoon, fed by a fountain at the east end, will run down the middle of the court.

To the south of the main L is a two-story building to hold the artist studios and an inviting tea room. The first floor of the main building will be taken up with 25 specialized "shops"; on the second floor will be shops for women, beauty parlors and dressmakers; the third floor will house offices of attorneys, real estate dealers and insurance men.

The fourth floor is reserved for physicians and dentists.

Mr. Jewell declares that eventually the retail section of Omaha will have the courthouse as its hub and that Aquila Court is one of the first to anticipate the change of center.

40 Captives Are Detained for Ransom

Marauders Mingle With Mourners and Kill Two Soldiers and Four Civilians Before Taking to Hills.

By Associated Press.
Tsinanfu, Shantung, China, Aug. 23.—Reports received by missions here say that while the funeral of a wealthy Chinese was in progress at Feiching, a small town 25 miles west of here, a number of bandits who had mingled with the mourners, opened fire on a soldier guard of 10 men, putting them to flight and that when two soldiers and four civilians had been killed the bandits captured 40 members of the funeral party and are holding them for ransom.

The bandits and their captives are said to be in the hills near Wonshung on the Yellow river. Officials of the district are quoted as saying they are unable to cope with the bandits.

Attorney Has Own Solution

A dark-complexioned young man who talked pidgin English with a strong Italian accent appeared at Central police station Wednesday. "I want a get'a the permish to make whiskey," explained the young man, who appeared to be a recent arrival from sunny Italy. "I can make and sella the whiskey much'a faster than people can take th' mud from water."

With this powerful argument the young man appealed to the chief of detectives, the captain of police and the police commissioner for a permit to make liquor. The uninitiated at the police station stared at him with open mouths. But those who knew recognized the young man as Clair Mulvihill, young attorney, who amuses his friends by talking the dialect of several languages.
