Living Models to Display Dainty Silken Garments

This playlet will be given in the daylight silk department of the Burgess-Nash store Tuesday morning at 10:30 and again in the afternoon at 2:30. It is called "The Silken Trousseau." Garments made from the famous "Bloom-Knit" silk have been brought to Omaha by the Burgess-Nash company from New York.

Statue That Shocked New Rochelle

Photo shows the statue of Venus and Adonis photographed before canvas was draped on it on the lawn of the public library at New Rochelle, N. Y. New Rochelle, N. Y.—Venus and Adonis in dark hue marble, sans leaf and girdle, may or may not be art, but the group of life-sized sculpture stood draped in a piece of dirty canvas on the lawn of the public library at New Rochelle, N. Y., as a result of protests received by police from residents who complained that the statue is immoral. The statue by Frederick MacMonnies, sculptor of civic virtue, forms part of an exhibition of the works of famous sculptors which is to open at the public library on Monday. The design of the work is from Shakespeare's famous but frequently suppressed poem, and because of its size it was left on the lawn. It was recently purchased by the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York for $10,000.

Omaha Has Most Rookies at Camp

Leads Cities in Seventh Corps Area in Representation at Fort Des Moines.

Omaha has more young men in the city's military training camp at Fort Des Moines than any other city in the Seventh corps area, according to George M. Carey, secretary of the federal relations committee of the Omaha Chamber of Commerce, who just returned from making an inspection of the camp by direction of the committee. Seventy young men from Omaha were training at the camp during August; Minneapolis and St. Paul with a population of nearly a million, sent 45; St. Louis sent 14 and Des Moines 15. Mr. Carey, who is also a captain in the Reserve corps, spent two days at the camp. "The instruction in Americanism, physical welfare and military training were carried on in an unusually interesting and thorough manner," he declared. "The mornings of each day were devoted exclusively to military drill and shooting on the range. In the early afternoon the young men were instructed in the American constitution, what it means and its importance to good citizenship, physical and mental development with physical drills. After 3 p. m. there were ball games, boxing matches and camp athletics. "All classes, in all branches of instruction were conducted by regular army officers who were detailed by the War department for that purpose. Students taking the complete four-year course are commissioned officers in the Reserve corps. Cavalry, infantry, artillery and other branches of the service were represented in the camp with complete schedules of study.

Man Conquers Mount Wilbur

Glacier Park, Mont., Aug. 24.—Norman Clyde, 35, Weaverville, Cal., schoolmaster, mountain climber and a member of the Sierra club of San Francisco, today did what no other human being ever could do before. He ascended Mount Wilbur, 9,293 feet, in Glacier National park. His hobnailed boots made the first human tracks upon the 100-yard square summit of this mountain. The best mountain climbers of the United States have failed to scale this peak. Clyde remained on the summit several hours in order to build a monument to the late Doctor Wynn, nationally known mountain climber, who lost his life two years ago while climbing Mount Sycamore. Dr. Wynn had made unsuccessful attempts to climb Mount Wilbur, but was never fortunate enough to find what Clyde says perhaps is the only possible route to the summit of a very difficult mountain, a chimney climb up its almost perpendicular face.

Nebraskans to Visit New Bridge

Special Train to Yankton Fair—Omahans to Inspect New Trade Artery.

Governor McMasters of South Dakota, of gasoline price-cutting fame, will greet Governor Bryan of Nebraska at 3:30 p. m., August 29, at the "meeting of the ways," the Yankton bridge at Yankton, S. D., welcoming 125 Omaha business men to the rich agricultural region. The Yankton bridge, which is now under construction, will be the opening wedge for the business men of Omaha and Nebraska into Dakota, especially the great wheat and cattle section of eastern South Dakota.

Bridge to Aid Business.

Business men here and in other parts of the state say that when the Yankton bridge is completed millions of dollars worth of products will be shipped into this city and in return millions of dollars worth of Omaha and Nebraska merchandise will be sent to that section.

The Yankton bridge when completed will give Omaha industries a direct route to Yankton, making it only 156 miles away from this city. Although Minneapolis is more than 300 miles and Chicago more than 500 miles from Yankton, these two cities obtain Yankton's business because of the direct railroad load lines.

"The Yankton district is begging to do business with Nebraska," said W. A. Ellis, assistant commissioner of the Chamber of Commerce. "They like us as neighbors and they want to be more closely associated with us."

To Cost $1,500,000.

The Yankton bridge is being erected through stock subscription. It will cost $1,500,000, completed. The farmers of the district, realizing the importance of the bridge, have already subscribed $750,000 and business men of this city have bought $30,000 worth of stock.

When the bridge is completed the direct route will be from Omaha through Hartington to Yankton. A special train of Nebraskans, led by Governor Bryan and Mayor Dahlman will journey to the northern city for the celebration. It will also be "Omaha day" at the Yankton county fair.

The Omaha delegation, together with Dr. Waggoner's Saxophone Jazz band, will leave Union station here at 9 o'clock, August 28.

German Crash Feared by U. S.

England's Efforts to Soften French Policy Regarded as Failure.

By Associated Press. Washington, Aug. 25.—The internal situation in Germany, notwithstanding recent indications of some improvement, is regarded in Washington with grave apprehension. Most American officials for obvious reasons have refrained from discussing the question publicly but many members of the house and senate and others who have studied European conditions at first hand this summer agree privately that the outlook is disquieting. In broadly representative diplomatic circles too, there is a pronounced and almost universal note of discouragement. Some representatives of countries not concerned directly with German reparations regard a crash in central Europe as inevitable.

In diplomatic circles a relaxation of the pressure in the Ruhr is not expected because of what is regarded as an inflexible public opinion in France and even in Germany, said to preclude any marked change of policy on outstanding questions at issue. Any such change was held to be impossible long before Premier Baldwin made his initial statement on reparations in commons in what has been regarded as an effort to save central Europe from disaster.

In these circumstances it has been clear since President Coolidge assumed office that there appears no course open to the Washington government with respect to Europe other than the one mapped out under the administration of President Harding. The wisdom of this policy is regarded at both the White House and the State department as already confirmed by events. There is no doubt Washington officials want to do what they can to help, but the very elements which constitute the greater danger signs abroad are regarded as increasing the peril of any effort toward mediation.

Election Favors Free Staters

By Associated Press. London, Aug. 25.—Morning newspapers, reviewing the election prospects in Ireland, record a general belief that the success of the government party is assured but admit the existence of sufficient unknown quantities to leave some doubt, especially in view of the large number of new electors.

Opinion seems to be virtually unanimous that however the government party fares, the new deal will contain a considerable majority in favor of the treaty and the free state constitution.

The statement of Frank Aitken, De Valera's chief of staff, that whatever happens the republicans will not surrender their arms, is said greatly to have damaged the republican chances. Aitken has eluded capture and issues encouraging messages to his supporters, although it is said he is being constantly hunted from mountain to mountain by government agents.

Nation Seeking Missing Baby

Case of Lillian McKenzie Compared to That of Charlie Ross.

By Universal Service. New York, Aug. 25.—Years have rolled by since Charlie Ross was stolen and a whole nation talked of nothing else but his kidnapping and searched for him in vain. Today all New York is asking: "Have they found the baby yet?" And the one topic of conversation among 6,000,000 people is the strange disappearance of little Lillian McKenzie.

At the end of the seventh day of search the police are at the end of a cold trail and Peter McKenzie and his wife sit in the humble tenement and gaze dazedly at the little snapshot of their 3-months-old kidnaped child.

The missing child always grips at the heart of a people, but when to the natural parent longing is added the strange lack of motive for the stealing of a 3-months-old infant, there is no end to the interest it inspires.

No Reason for Kidnaping.

For Lillian is the child of poor parents; she was ill and emaciated when she was snatched from her carriage in front of a 10-cent store in which her mother was making purchases; there was no enemy in the world known to Peter McKenzie and wife, and there has been no trace of a body to point to a crime of a warped mind or one torn by a fanatical wrong. It is a kidnaping apparently without a reason.

The police, baffled at every point, have hung their hope on the theory that the child was stolen from the carriage by a beggar woman, one of those derelicts of society. They believe the woman intends to use the sickly looking child to inspire pity and bring dolars from a public that does not pity easily.

In the subway, on the elevated, in the streets, Lillian McKenzie's strange disappearance is talked over, guessed at, pitted.

Clues Run Down.

Friday the police were running down letters purporting to give trace of the child. Two letters, one from Brooklyn, the other from Rutherford, N. J., demanded $1,000 for a ransom. The Rutherford letter was passed over as that of a crank. It was signed "K. K. K." and marked with thumb prints in ink and demanded that the money be left in the smoke stack of a factory at Rutherford.

Ask the Man Who Hasn't One

RESIDENT Coolidge's new secretary (who is a bachelor) says every man in public life needs a wife to help him along in his career. So the men of Omaha need some woman to tell them about the dandy linen handkerchiefs they can buy here for only 25c apiece. They're torn (not cut) from fine mellow linen so the narrow quarter-inch hems are straight and true. They emerge snowy white from repeated tubbings in a way cotton ones never do. By the dozen, they are $2.75.

It Pays

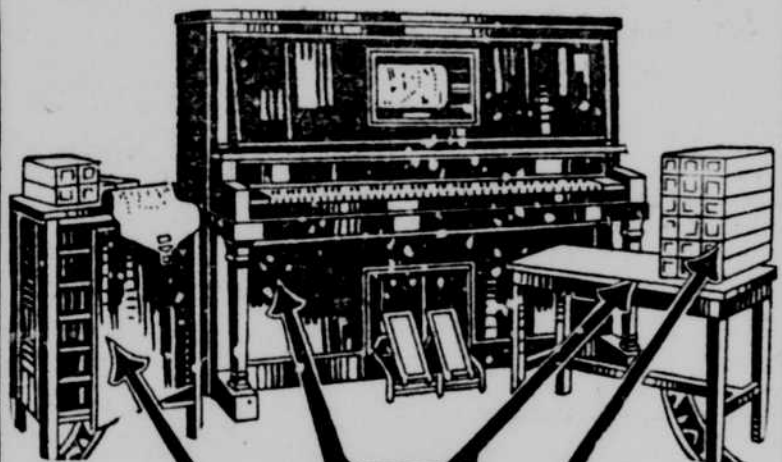

Because so many women all over these United States prefer the youthful smartness of Betty Wales fashions it pays their makers to spend $14,000 for pages 74 and 75 in this week's Saturday Evening Post to announce a group of new fall dresses for "school girls, college women and the younger business women" at $22.75. You can only buy them at Thompson-Belden's in Omaha. Look them over in the Dress Section tomorrow.

Carry Them

It's the Way They Reading about the history-making trip of the night mail planes and the little parachute pilot carries strapped on his back reminds me of the way the women wear the new Tom Thumb umbrellas. They're adorably short and stubby, with odd English-looking handles to which is fastened a long cord that one wears over the shoulder, carrying Mr. Tom Thumb a la the pilot's parachute. In purple, green, navy or scarlet silk they cost $10.
