The Right Start.
A 15-Million City.
A Good Methodist Fight.
Pink Dresses—Poor Women.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

President Coolidge picked the right man to deal with the coal problem. Governor Pinchot begins negotiations by telling both sides that the important party in the discussion is not the mine owner and not the mine worker, but the PUBLIC. He adds that a strike will not be permitted. His statement, concerning a settlement, "the thing is possible, it must be done," describes the situation.

With proper support from the president, who has the power to work the mines if their owners cannot work them, the big thing will be done.

The workers know that Pinchot is a just man, friendly to the under dog. The owners know that Pinchot is an able man, understands business and is no "red" radical.

Courtland Smith, chairman of the board of the American Press association and chief assistant of Will Hays, recently back from California, says:

"You underestimate the growth of Los Angeles and of all California. Within 50 years there will be 15,000,000 people in Los Angeles. Americans of the solid, substantial kind will go there more and more throughout the years, and Americans of an earlier day went to Paris, and those that go to Los Angeles, stay there. Los Angeles will pass New York in time—bigger ocean, better climate, cheaper living, greater happiness and comfort per dollar."

The Methodist Episcopal church has started a war on prize fighting, attacking especially brutal exhibitions given under sanction of the highest officials, in the army navy.

You are told that boxing develops courage. But you didn't notice it in the war. The percentage of boxers that did NOT go to war was higher than in any other line of effort.

"Fighting with fists develops courage," they say. In these days when men must face the crown end of a bayonet, keep their nerves when bombs explode and shrapnel flies, to call boxing a preparation for real war is preposterous.

In old days of fighting with fists men used to bite off each other's ears and noses.

Why not start, in the army and navy, ear and nose-biting contests under the superintendence of admirals and generals, to make our boys "brave?"

The Methodists are to be congratulated on a fight that a dozen churches should have started long ago.

Some American fighters, Grant, Sherman, Lee, Farragut, not to mention Lincoln, who did the mental fighting, got along quite well without prize fighting to develop their morale.

At the Bedford reformatory for girls, young ladies that behave are allowed to wear bright pink dresses. As a result there is improvement in manners.

"Poor, weak, female human nature," says superior MAN. But men have paid more attention to dress in the past than to any other one thing. Many a king thought more of his gold crown, purple cloak, lined with ermine, than of his people or his own morals.

The great Alexander, rebuking discontented followers, held out the royal cloak from his shoulders, reminding them that he had made them all rich, whereas that cloak was all he had got out of his travels, fighting and risks.

Napoleon, selecting the robe worn when he took the crown from the pope's hands to crown himself, chose a magnificent costume, much finer than any pink dress of the reformatory girl. And it interested him as much as any battle.

The army air service plans a flight 50,000 feet up. That announcement will seem strange 500 years from now.

In the great depths of the ocean are fish that never have been more than a few fathoms above the bed of the sea. Billions of them live and die without rising to the surface.

The air around us is OUR ocean. We are the fish living at the bottom of it. But unlike those deep sea fish we overcome physical conditions with our brains, and slowly we rise.

The day is coming when many will live for long periods six miles in the air, where there is no wind, conducting the big around-the-world flying machines, that never come down except for repairs, dropping passengers in smaller air boats at principal points, Pekin, London, etc., living in the air, as millions of Chinese at present live on the water, never coming ashore.

Shipping Board Fleet Operation Plan Submitted

Vessels Will Be Put in Hands of Subsidiary Corporations if Not Placed Under Private Ownership.

Washington, Aug. 28.—Operation of the shipping board fleet through subsidiary corporations owned by the board is proposed in the government's alternative operation plan outlined today by Chairman Farley at a conference with ship owners. It would be put in effect in case present efforts to place the ships under private ownership fail.

The corporations each would operate one or more lines and would have the commercial form of organization and operation that will be followed by a private purchaser when such purchaser has been found. The shipping board would exercise the same direct control over them that any large private corporation exercises over its subsidiaries.

Chairman Farley's announcement was made in response to a declaration by the steamship owners that before they could perfect concrete proposals they must know what the board had in mind as an alternative. After he had presented his plan, Mr. Farley asked the owners and operators to act quickly.

"We cannot brook any delay," he said, "but must proceed."

Auto Tourists Now Homeward Bound

Now that summer is gradually drawing to a close, as evidenced by the cool nights, and vacation time is beginning to be a memory, thousands of motor tourists are turning their faces homeward after sojourning in the "great open spaces."

The auto tourist camp at Elmwood park is getting its quota of returning sons and daughters of several states. After dusk there is a rattle, a creak of brakes, then silence. A newcomer has arrived. The following morning the rattle is duplicated and the arrival of the previous night is again on his or her way to home and—nine months of routine.

There, for three hours, they sat in wonder before the show prepared by Samson, swore the oath as loyal subjects of King Ak-Sar-Ben XXIX and took frequent swigs from their jugs of Lincoln water with many "ahs" and smacking of lips, and

Eight Men Taken in Fremont Boze Raid

Special Dispatch to The Omaha Bee, Fremont, Neb., Aug. 28.—Eight men were arrested in a raid by Sheriff Condit and state agents at the home of Frank Rhein, Fremont, this afternoon, charged with violating the prohibition laws.

Rhein has been arrested on the same charge many times. The others taken today are Thorwald Rasmussen, John Jones, John Larsen, Laurel Rossengren, Bill Keegan and Harry Philour. Keegan was arrested Monday on a similar charge and was released on bond when caught at the Rhein home today. The officials confiscated a gallon jug containing alleged liquor.

On Rhein's last previous arrest Mrs. Rhein succeeded in emptying most of the contents of a nearby jug in a wash tub, destroying the evidence.
