Mothers Are Often Selfish Where Only Sons Are Concerned

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I am a girl 21 and have a boy friend 23. He has told me that he loved me.

Now, he is an only child and his mother is continually making things unpleasant for us. No matter what I suggest she always has her refusal ready even before she has thought the thing over.

We have our vacation period at the same time. My folks are taking a cottage at the seashore and have invited him down to spend his vacation with us. We have also invited his mother but she doesn't approve and won't let him come.

Is it improper for him to come down with us? My aunt, a middle-aged woman, will be there all the time and my father and brother most of the time. Do you think that his mother is right in acting this way?

I love this young man very dearly and don't know just what action to take.

A mother is likely to want to hold her only son as long as she can—and some day when you are a mother you will do the selfsame thing. So don't be ugly about the situation or try to win your happiness by breaking the older woman's will. There would be nothing "improper" about the visit you suggest. Why don't you try to win the mother's love instead of striving to estrange her son from her. Make her feel that you are her friend—not her enemy—and she may conquer her selfishness and learn that her boy's happiness cannot always be in her keeping.
