ROTARIANS TOLD

Omaha Is First in Number of Drainage Contractors.

Omaha is the largest headquarters try, althought very little drainage work is done in Nebraska, said Clyde S. Drew, drainage contractor, at the Rotary club meeting Wednesday tioon. Mr. Drew was one of three executives who gave brief talks upon their businesses, the other two being recent arrivals in Omaha, L. Vaughn Griffin of R. G. Dun company, and Hoscoe Taylor of the Western News-

Note of Taylor of the Western Newspaper Union.

With eight firms having 40 drag line machines representing an investment of $1,000,000, Omaha drainage contractors handle an annual business aggregating $1,375,000, all of which passes through the Omaha banks. Most of the work is done in lowa, Illinois, Missouri, and southern states, less than $25,000 a year being done in Nebraska.

Mr. Griffin spoke in rhyme concerning the activities of R. G. Dun company in gathering information about mercantile houses, rating them, according to financial standing and presenting the findings to the business world. He mentioned the publications of the agency, Dun's Review, and The World's Markets.

lications of the agency, Dun's Review, and The World's Markets, the former printed in several lan-the former printed in several languages. At the close of his rhyme a motion was passed to print a copy of it in the next issue of the Rotary Whirl.

The Western Newspaper Union, according to Mr. Taylor, is capitalized at $6,500,000, of which 85 per cent is owned by Omaha people. It does a business of $1,000,000 a week, which passes through the Omaha banks. Its general offices in this city direct the activities of 2,000 employes in all parts of the country. The Western Newspaper Union offers ready prints, stereotype plates, matrices, wholesale
