

Fireworks Fail to Materialize in City Council

W. C. T. U. Delegation Left Holding Sack When Mayor Moves to Adjourn the Session.

Twelve women tensed for expected action, members of the Omaha W. C. T. U., sat in city council chamber Tuesday morning.

Mayor Dahlman with six councilmen and city clerk dived over routine petitions.

Representatives of the press sat with poised pencils.

Beyond the railing sat the usual motley gathering of lawyers, bootleggers and good citizens.

Expectancy charged the air, for—Rumor had spread that Dan B. Butler, commissioner of police, was to be removed; that—

Search Held Illegal. Patrolmen Reilly and Eggers, late searchers of automobiles in suspected districts for contraband liquor, were to be suspended or—something. Previous meetings had produced legal opinion that the officers were conducting illegal search.

The drone of City Clerk Claude Bossie's voice came to a grinding stop. There was a second of dramatic pause. Women of the W. C. T. U. leaned forward—onlookers and attorneys, and political hangers-on sat up.

"That's all the business?" Mayor Dahlman's voice was scarcely audible.

"That's All." "That's all," said Bossie.

"Move to adjourn," snapped the mayor, his words being quickly followed by a sharp intake of breath.

Like machine gun fire, beginning with Koutsky, at the mayor's left, five succeeding councilmen snapped: "Second the motion." The sixth raised a querulous eye at his co-officials, then behind the trace of a smile on lips hardly opened he said "Second."

The councilmen rose. W. C. T. U. members stared blankly, obviously stunned. No motion was made in the crowd outside the railing until one by one councilmen began to leave the chamber. Newspaper men darted to various members of the council plying questions—"What—Did you put over the Reilly-Eggers action—How about Butler?"

Mayor Is Halted. Mayor Dahlman, halted on his way to the door by one of the W. C. T. U. members, engaged in surreptitious conversation. The woman moved away.

"What was expected?" blankly asked the mayor to rapid-fire queries.

Mission Romance Leads to Altar

Ralph H. Lohrborg visited the Kountze Memorial Lutheran mission at Nineteenth and Castelar three years ago. Rapidly he gained an interest in the work, taught a class in Sunday school and finally was placed in full charge by Rev. O. D. Baltzly and Rev. George Dorn.

About a year ago a new teacher came from the parent church to the mission. She was Miss Frieda Holstein, a fair and charming young woman.

Mr. Lohrborg's enthusiasm for the mission grew greater than ever after Miss Holstein took a class. And tonight they will be married at Kountze Memorial church.

Mr. Lohrborg has a position with the Standard Oil company. In his spare time he has canvassed the city in a radius of eight blocks on each side of the mission. He has brought many into the little church. The Sunday school, which had 30 members when he went there, now has 90.

"Yes, indeed, we expect to keep right on working in the little mission after our marriage," said Mr. Lohrborg happily.

claims of the district against the city totaling in the neighborhood of $35,000. This motion was made by Commissioner Dunn, and there was no dissenting vote.

Members of the W. C. T. U. declined to say whether they would attend other meetings of the council.

8 More American Dead. Washington, Sept. 18.—The names of eight more Americans "reported dead or missing" in the Japanese earthquake, were forwarded to the State department by Ambassador Woods and Consul Dickover, at Kobe.

They were: Mrs. T. W. Chisholm and child; P. C. Schefer, Mrs. Chambers, Mrs. Nora C. E. Hilton, Mr. Shelley of Standard Oil company, Irvin Skooski and Olga Milostawsky. The first seven were said by Mr. Woods to be "reported dead" and the other by Consul Dickover to be reported "missing."

Governor Favors Gravel for Roads

Tells Hastings Commerce Body That State Should Operate Own Supply Plant.

Hastings, Neb., Sept. 18.—Governor Bryan strongly advocated the use of gravel in Nebraska road building. In an address at the Hastings Chamber of Commerce luncheon Monday afternoon.

The governor was the principal speaker among a number of guests who were here to attend the state convention of the American Legion.

The governor's observations on a trip of some 1,400 miles of gravelled roads in Minnesota during the summer had convinced him, he said, that gravel should be used in Nebraska.

Governor Bryan said the state should operate its own gravel supply. He declared that gravel is now handled by a monopoly in Nebraska and that prices have been excessive. A more inquiry by the state looking to the operation of a plant at Ashland had brought a reduction in price, he said, of nearly one-third.

The governor to the chamber of the state-owned cement plant in South Dakota, which he understood was a money-saving enterprise for the state. He said he was not in favor of the state engaging in industries except to hold monopolies in check.

Samson Defies Wet Weather

Ak-Sar-Ben Pageant Will Be Five Miles Long.

And again Tuesday did the great King Ak arise and look from his window, only to find the sky overcast and threatening.

"What, more rain?" he thundered, a scowl crossing his countenance. "It would seem the fates are conspiring against the success of my great race meet at Ak-Sar-Ben track."

Then a smile replaced the scowl, for the mighty Samson remembered that yesterday was "ladies' day" at the races and that the fairest of his realm would be present to cheer as the racing steeds came down the royal home stretch.

King Ak also remembered that the Lions' club members were to attend on this day, and he knew that these noble Lions would not fail him, even
