

Long Search for Alleged Bandit Ends at Fremont

Officers Refuse Plea of George Thompson That Woman Companion Accompany Him to Ohio.

Fremont, Neb., Sept. 19.—George Thompson, alias Sandy Kilgore, alleged auto thief and stickup man, left Wednesday afternoon, in custody of an officer, for Newark, O., but without his feminine companion. Despite his pleadings, threats and promises, the officials decreed that the woman who was with him at the time of his arrest and asked to be placed in jail with him, could not accompany Thompson on his return trip to Newark.

Thompson and the woman were arrested by Fremont officials when they were unable to produce a marriage license or prove ownership of the auto they were driving. Both insisted that they were married. The alleged wife said her home is in North Platte, where she said she joined Thompson on his cross-country trip. When arrested, no charges were preferred against the woman, but she insisted that she be jailed in order that she might be near Thompson. She refused to leave alone. Thompson is wanted in Ohio for an alleged holdup last June and his arrest ends a nationwide search for him.

Plainview Club Raises $85 for Japanese Relief

Plainview, Neb., Sept. 19.—The Plainview Community club held a "tag" day for the Japanese Red Cross relief fund and the sum of $85 was raised. Tickets were sold during the afternoon and evening, each ticket being good for a sandwich at a stand in the business section conducted by a committee of women.

MICHAEL O'HALLORAN

By Gene Stratton-Porter

SYNOPSIS. Michael O'Halloran, an orphan, finds a little lame girl screaming with fright for fear that she will be taken to an orphanage. Her grandmother has just died. Mickey is sympathetic and takes the child to his home and attempts to care for her. Douglas Bruce, a corporation lawyer, has been Mickey's guardian since his mother's death. However, before he can mention the subject, Mickey disappears. He tells all of this to Leslie Winton, his sweetheart, and declares that he will find Mickey yet.

Mickey in the meantime struggles to get home for his family. He is impossible to tell anyone about her for fear that any stranger will force him to put the child in an orphanage. One woman threatens this and Mickey leaves her, determined to help no one for fear that in the conversation he will tell about the girl. He has hardly gone a block when he meets Leslie Winton and she tells him that she has been looking for him, losing consciousness. He takes her to a hospital. There he meets a nurse, who gives him things for Peaches and instructs him in how to care for her. Douglas Bruce and Leslie Winton become engaged and on the morning following their betrothal she tells Mickey to make the basket as agreed.

Douglas Bruce and Leslie Winton become engaged and on the morning following their betrothal she tells Mickey to make the basket as agreed.

After today, it was due you to send a word. You tried so hard, dear, and you gave me real joy for an hour. Then James carried out his threat. He did all to me he intended, and more than he can ever know. I have agreed to him taking full possession of the boys, and going into a home such as he thinks suitable. They will be far better off, and since they scarcely know me, they can't miss me. But she insisted that she be jailed in order that she might be near Thompson. She refused to leave alone. rooms, until the next errand is ready," suggested Douglas. Mickey began gathering up the morning papers, straightening the rugs, curtains and arranging the furniture. "Hand this check to the janitor," said Douglas. "And, Mickey, kindly ask him if $2 was what I agreed to pay him for my extra this week."

"I never did. I don't know how," answered Mickey. "You can learn, can't you?" suggested Douglas. "Sure!" said Mickey. "I've seen boys carrying golf clubs that hadn't enough sense to break stone right. I can learn, but my learning might spoil your day's sport."

"It would be no big price to pay for an intelligent caddy," replied Douglas. "Mr. Bruce, what price is an intelligent caddy worth?" "Our Scotch Club pays 50 cents a game and each man employs his own boy if he chooses. The club used to furnish boys, but since the Big Brother movement began, so many of the men have boys in their offices they are accustomed to, and want to give a run over the hills after the day's work, that the rule has been changed. I can employ you, if you want to serve me."

"What time would we get back?" he asked. "Depends on how late I play, and whether I have dinner at the club house, say seven as a rule, maybe ten or later at times." "Nothing doing," said Mickey promptly. "All right then. I'm sorry!" exclaimed Douglas. "So am I," said Mickey. "But not about the job," Douglas laughed. "Well come along this evening and look on. I'll be back before six and I'll run you where we did last night, if that is close to your home."

the first chance at sunrise. Multiplis hasn't ever followed his example by giving them anything. "Now I am driving to the golf grounds for an hour's play," said Douglas. "Will you go and caddy for me?" "I never did. I don't know how," answered Mickey. "You can learn, can't you?" suggested Douglas. "Sure!" said Mickey. "I've seen boys carrying golf clubs that hadn't enough sense to break stone right. I can learn, but my learning might spoil your day's sport."

I'll be back before six and I'll run you where we did last night, if that is close to your home."

"Thanks," said Mickey. "I'd love to, but you needn't bother about taking me home. I can make it if I start at six. Shall I take the things back to the cafe?" "Let them go until morning," said Douglas. "There's messenger work in my business." "I see I like that! I like your work all right," said Mickey. "Gimme a few days to sell my route to the best advantage I can, and I'll come all day. I'll come for about half what you are paying now."

"But you admit you need money urgently." "Well not so urgently as to skin a friend to get it—not even with the winter I hadn't thought of coming. Gee—I don't know just what I am going to do about that." "For yourself, Mickey?" inquired Douglas. "Well in a way, yes," hesitated Mickey. "There are things to think about! Gee I got to hump myself while the sun shines! If you say so, then I'll get out of the paper business as soon as I can; and I'll begin work for you steady at noon tomorrow. I've seen you pay out over seven today. I'll come for six. Is it a bargain?"

"No," said Douglas, "it isn't! The janitor bill was for a week of half done work. The messenger bill was for two days, no caddying at all. If you come you will come for not less than eight and what you earn extra over that, I don't agree to better service for less pay. If you will have things between us on a commercial basis, so will I." "Shall I sit up with your man?" asked Mickey. "My friends sit beside me," said Douglas.

While the car was running its smoothest, while the country Mickey had not seen save on rare newsboy excursions, flashed past, while the wonder of the club house, the links, and the work he would have loved to do developed, he shivered and cried in his tormented little soul "Gee, how will I ever keep Lily warm?" Douglas noticed his abstraction and wondered. He had expected more appreciation of what Mickey was seeing and doing; he was coming to the realization that he would find out what was in the boy's heart in his own time and way. On the home run, when Douglas reached his rooms, he told the driver to take Mickey to the end of the car line; the boy shyly interposed to ask if he might go to the "Star of Hope Hospital," so prayer too nice for anything, once we got it fixed so she'd say it at all." "What did you teach her, Mickey?" "Now I lay me." "Mickey, is there enough of such a little girl to furnish a piece of poetry every day?" asked the nurse. "Surest thing you know!" cried Mickey enthusiastically. "Why there are the hundred gold rings on her head, one for each; and her eyes, tender and teary, and sad and glad, one for each; and the color of them different a dozen times a day, and her little white face, and her lips, and her smile, and when she's good, and when she's bad; why miss, there's enough of Lily for a book big as Mr. Bruce's biggest law book."

"(Continued in The Morning Bee.) Because of the women's elaborate hairdressing Japan is a nation without millinery stores. Mickey's passport held good at the hospital. The Sunshine Nurse inspected the cakes and approved them. She was so particular she even took a tiny nibble of one and said: "Sugar, flour, egg and shortening—all right Mickey, those can't hurt her. And now is she today?" "Fine!" cried Mickey. "She is getting a lot stronger already. She can sit up longer and help herself better, and she's got ribbons, the prettiest you ever laid eyes on, that a lady gave me for her hair, and they make her pink and nice; and she's got a baby doll in long clean white dresses to snuggle down and stay with her all day; and she's got a slate, and a book, and she knows 'cow' and 'milk' and my name, and today she is learning bread." Tomorrow I am going to teach her 'baby,' and she can say her
