Thanks to Mr. Eastman. The Bigger the Better. Roads Above Railroads. To 5,000 Bankers.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Thanks to Mr. Eastman of Rochester, and the wide, wide world, this country sees efficient and thorough development of musical talent. To help a nation in music is to help it intellectually. Music and intellect are sisters. Music arouses the brain, refreshes and stimulates it, as nothing else can do. Music is the only stimulant that has no "next day" of let-down and reaction.

Mr. Eastman's school of music in the University of Rochester brings to the city and to the students of music the best musicians of the world, and provides musical genius with a magnificent setting in a beautiful opera house, given to the city by Mr. Eastman and paying financial profit to no one. Young people from all over the United States win scholarships that give them free teaching and $1,000 a year for living expenses. Thus one man's success finds expression in a way that benefits an entire nation.

The White Star and Cunard lines have agreed to combine and run a joint trans-Atlantic service during the coming winter instead of fighting each other for scanty traffic. That's common sense. And the British government will not interfere. Modern methods call for the biggest possible combinations in all lines. "The bigger the better, but under public control," should be the program.

A. H. Smith, president of the New York Central, practical man, understanding traffic problems, says that commuters from big cities will soon cause more troubles than the railroads have ever known because of intolerable congestion in suburban traffic. The railroads must decide to carry through passengers and neglect commuters or limit through traffic to take care of commuters.

Dr. HARRIS, New York traffic expert, brings from Europe a suggestion that should interest Mr. Smith and everybody else.

"Build express automobile roads above the railroad tracks, wherever that is possible," says Dr. HARRIS. Let the railroads charge a yearly sum for automobiles, using the upper deck of the railroad.

New York Central tracks from New York to Albany, the Northwestern and the St. Paul out of Chicago and many other railroads, particularly the Long Island railroad in New York state, could each take care of hundreds of thousands of automobiles. Much of the commuting traffic would go by automobile and motor bus and the railroads, quite properly, would get a return on all passengers and express matter thus carried.

Railroad tunnels, bridges, etc., could offer difficulties. But the things could be done, and it might settle the railroad problem of making ends meet and meeting automobile competition.

To the 5,000 bankers soon to gather in Atlantic City—greeting and a word of advice:

Encourage and permit the government to run the postal savings banks on a generous, attractive basis.

Thus you will keep in the United States 75 per cent of the hundreds of millions that immigrants now send to Europe, because they do not understand the soundness and safety of American savings and other banks. They would all trust the United States government, and if encouraged, they would rather keep their savings here in good dollars than risk Europe's currency.

In the end, all these millions having developed into intelligently handled capital, would go to the big banks. Encourage the little fellow from abroad to keep his money here. He will be your big customer later. Where his treasure is, his heart will be. Don't force him to lay up treasure in Europe.

The mountain has gone to Mohammed. At least, the British would say so. Baldwin, British prime minister, was in Paris yesterday consulting with Poincare about the Ruhr, which is Europe's cancer; about Fiume and Corfu, where Mussolini is demonstrating the power of a strong will, entirely surrounded by feeble uncertainty.

A lucky thing for Europe, today, is the unlimited diplomatic patience of the British Cabinet, carefully calculating, absolutely devoted to the empire that they represent, they look far ahead. They do not allow the difficulty or the irritation of the moment to endanger the great thing, which is British imperial power in the future.

Next to that of the vatican, the diplomacy of Great Britain is the ablest in Europe.

Manuel Quezon, political boss in the Philippine islands, made a two-hour speech in Manila, saying Americans should get out and let Filipinos rule. "It's God's will," said he. If that's so, of course, the Filipinos will rule. But is it so?

The great Chief Red Jacket, whose statue now stands in a public park in Buffalo, once made a speech four times as long as Quezon's, saying the white men should not take their red brothers' land. But the white men took it. God's will is not to be read by everybody.

States Must Enforce Dry Laws, Edict

Coolidge Plan for Prosecutions to Relieve Federal Courts of Cases Commonwealths Can Handle.

Washington, Sept. 20.—President Coolidge plans to bring about a more drastic enforcement of laws by requiring each state in the union to assume its share of prosecutions, it was learned yesterday.

The program is aimed directly at dry law enforcement, but involves all federal laws where states have similar statutes, it was stated at the Department of Justice. A comprehensive survey of the situation has just been completed by Attorney General Daugherty.

This study revealed that the whole trouble has been brought about by state legal officials throwing all of their prosecutions into the federal courts. This situation can be remedied by the simple expedient of having the states relieve the United States judiciary of the burden, it was stated.

If President Coolidge calls a conference of governors in October as now contemplated, he will lay such a program before them and ask their cooperation in putting it into execution. If not, he is expected to communicate with the state executives direct, it is understood.

In the meantime instructions have been issued to district attorneys and federal officials in the various districts to have them endeavor to have local officials try all cases where state and federal laws are nearly identical.

The main congestion is for violations of the prohibition law, it was stated, but there has been a growing tendency to throw any number of whom the post was named, served with the First Nebraska regiment, which he helped to raise and in which he held the post of adjutant. Later he helped organize the Fifth Ohio Volunteer Infantry and was appointed lieutenant-colonel, later winning the rank of brigadier-general.

At the end of the war he returned to Nebraska to resume his practice of law. He died in Omaha, where his widow and a daughter, Mrs. J. B. Haynes, still live, in 1878.

Girl Dies, Said Victim of Police

Mob Threatens Station—Child Arrested on Grand Larceny Charge.

Detroit, Sept. 20.—While three physicians appointed by Coroner James Burgess, today examined the body of Gladyslava Lorenc, 13-year-old Polish girl, who, her father alleges, died Saturday as a result of mistreatment by police while under arrest on a charge of grand larceny, police are on guard in the vicinity of the girl's home to prevent any demonstration.

Two riot calls were sent to police headquarters last night and early today as a result of alleged demonstrations. John Lorenc, father of the girl, says his daughter told him just before she died that police had abused her and forced her to take ice baths in an attempt to make her confess to the robbery of $100 from Joseph F. Anderson, who lived in the same building.

Removed to Hospital. According to the report of James Speert, assistant superintendent of police, the girl was arrested on September 11 and sent at once to the juvenile detention home. The following day she was removed to a hospital and died Saturday as the result of acute pleurisy. The report says the girl was delirious when she talked to her father.

The father's story of police abuse resulted in hundreds of persons, many of them Polish and other foreigners, coming to view the body. Last night a mob estimated by police at between 4,000 and 5,000 packed the streets, yards and porches for two blocks in either direction from the house where the body of the girl lay. One of the mob threw a brick at a policeman attempting to keep order. When the man was placed under arrest, several hundred persons charged the police, three of whom were slightly injured. The police backed away from the mob and a riot call was turned in.

Crowd Dispersed. Shortly before midnight police dispersed the crowd around the house. Two hours later information was telephoned to the Chene street police station, a few blocks from the scene of trouble, that a mob, armed with shotguns and rifles was assembling around the station. A second riot call was sent in and police armed with riot guns guarded the Chene street station throughout the night, but no further trouble was reported.
