The library is equipped with hundreds of books.

Here are the youngsters who live in the Masonic Home for Boys, as bright and intelligent a group as you will find anywhere.

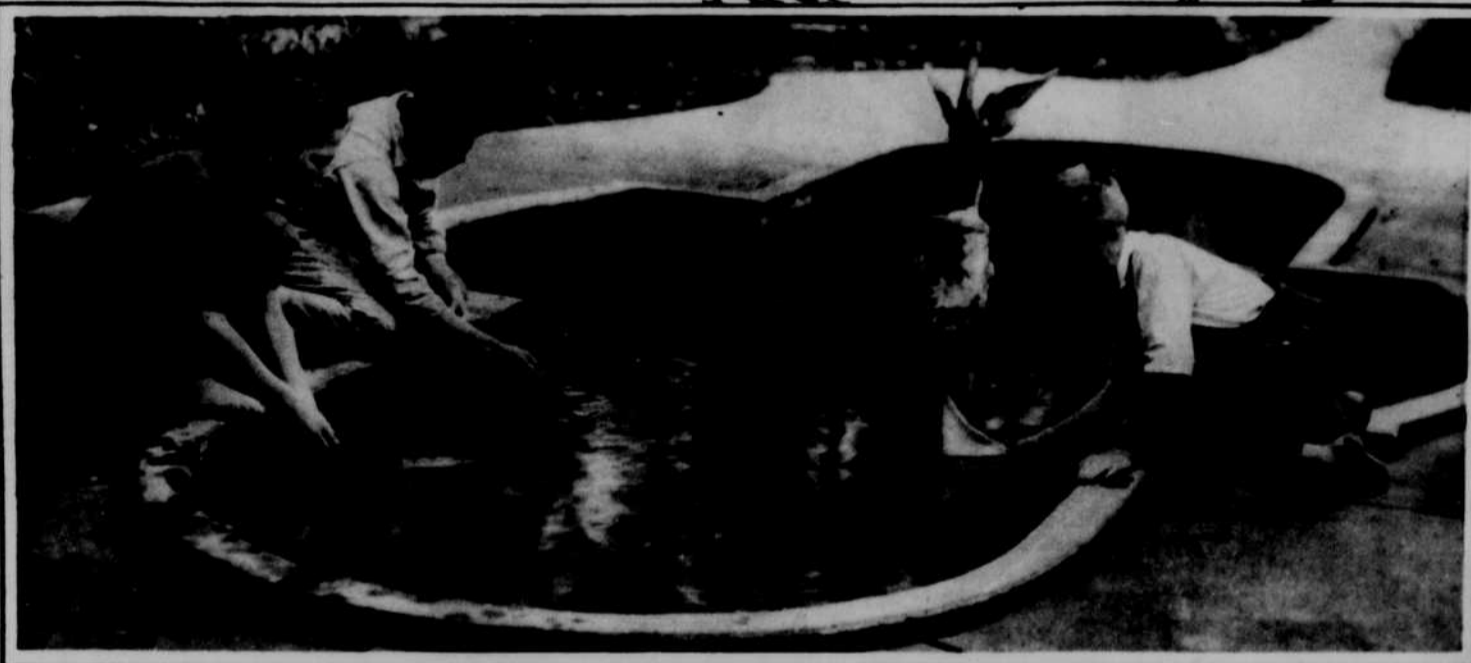

Ground-hog day.

Knuckle down! No fudging!

Better give this lad four wide ones. He has red hair.

"Sail" and "Steam" in competition. Two of the boys have made clever little aqua-planes with clock-work motors. Their progress through the water is rapid, if erratic.

The boys operate their own laundry

Thirty-two boys can eat a powerful lot of roasting ears.

These boys have constructed tiny model airplanes. The propellers are pitched so as to revolve with the wind, and the models are painted with gay water colors.
