Mrs. Dietz Nelson to Be Given Tea at Country Club.

Cards have been issued for a tea to be given Tuesday, October 9, from 4 until 5 o'clock when the hostesses will be Mrs. C. N. Dietz and Mrs. N. R. Hudson, and the honor guest, Mrs. Lenore Dietz Nelson who will arrive next week from Minneapolis following a year spent abroad.

Orpheum Stars Entertain at Woman's Club Luncheon.

One hundred and seventy-five members and friends of the Omaha Woman's club attended the matinee luncheon given by the speech education department of the club yesterday in the Burgess-Nash tea room; Anatole Friedland, well known song writer, and Arthur Ball, tenor, who are appearing at the Orpheum this week, gave a song program during the luncheon. Dance numbers were given by the Misses Fosteen and Max-one Potts, accompanied by the Burgess-Nash orchestra, Robert Cusden director.

Following the luncheon a one-act play, "Fleur-de-Lys and Company," was presented in the auditorium by Mrs. Benjamin Boasberg and Mrs. H. S. Kamen. Mrs. Grace Poole Steinberg gave a song group, accompanied by Mrs. Dean Ringer, with violin obligato by Mrs. Lillian Gould Faber.

Educator Here.

Mrs. Ella Knight of Laramie, Wyo., is visiting her brother, E. E. Howell, for a short time. She will go from here to Lincoln to be the guest of her sister, Miss Alice Howell, who is in charge of dramatics at the University of Nebraska.

Mrs. Knight, who was formerly dean of women at the University of Wyoming, is now president of the board of managers for Ivanson Hall, a school for girls at Laramie. She will return to her school in a month.

Ivanson Hall gives instruction in music, dancing, French and gymnasium. It has a capacity for 30 pupils and 23 are now enrolled. It is especially designed to be a home for girls from ranches, who come to Laramie to attend high school. Ivanson Hall supplements the high school course, where the girls get their academic work. The school is non-sectarian, though it was organized by Bishop N. S. Thomas, Episcopal bishop of Wyoming.

Comings and Goings of People You Know

Mrs. A. D. Smith of Salt Lake City is the guest of her sister, Mrs. J. H. Taylor, for two weeks.

L. B. Walmer left on Friday for San Diego, Cal., because of the severe illness of his father who lives there.

Mrs. E. D. Gould of Kearney, Neb., who has been visiting Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Smith, returned home Sunday.

Mrs. F. L. Geddes of Toledo who was visiting her daughter, Mrs. John U. Loomis, last week left Friday for her home.

Miss Martha Swenson, a teacher at Central high school, has returned from Europe where she spent the summer months.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Rushton and daughter, Marjorie, have returned from the Pacific coast, where they spent the summer.

Mrs. Herman Kountze and daughter, Mrs. Ella Cotton Magee, will move into the C. E. Fuller home, which they recently purchased, October 1.

Miss Ruth Wilmesky and Miss Estelle Lapidus, who went to Rockford college last year, are taking their sophomore year at the University of Omaha.

Miss Edythe Monson, who graduated last June in the course of preparation at the University of Omaha, left Sunday morning for Denver, where she will attend school this winter.

Dr. and Mrs. Wood returned Monday from their cottage at Lake Wood Park, Ia., and are at the Fontenelle for a time. Later they will go to California and from there to Honolulu for the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Baldrige, who have been in Atlantic City since their return from Europe, are expected home the first of next week. They will be at the Fontenelle hotel until December, when they leave for California to spend the winter.

Arthur Mullen, who with Mrs. Mullen, spent the summer in Europe, has been spending a few days in Mitchell, S. D. He is expected home Thursday. Mrs. Mullen will remain east for the convention of the National Council of Catholic Women to be held in Washington, D. C., September 30-October 4.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Cornforth of Melbourne, Australia, will arrive Wednesday evening to visit Mrs. Cornforth's mother, Mrs. T. J. Ryan. Mr. Cornforth is general manager of a large oil company for Australia and New Zealand and will go on to New York within two days. Mrs. Cornforth and her small daughter, Joanne, intend to remain here for a visit.

Mrs. F. C. Patton leaves late this week for the east. She will visit her daughter, Miss Frances, at Wellesley college. Miss Patton who is a senior left early for Wellesley to prepare the Xi Sigma house for opening at the beginning of the fall semester. After a visit in Boston and other eastern points, Mrs. Patton will go to Washington where she will be joined by Mr. Patton who will make the return trip with her.

Domestic Science Student.

Miss Leola Barnes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Barnes, who has been spending the summer here, has gone to Boston where she will enter the Boston School of Domestic Science. Miss Barnes is a graduate of Omaha Central high school and has specialized in domestic science. She has been associated with a club and tea room in Lincoln for two years. She enters the Boston school to specialize in cafeteria and tea room work.

Music Department to Elect New Officers.

Mrs. Philip Potter, president of the Omaha Woman's club, will preside at a special meeting of the music department Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Burgess-Nash auditorium. A new set of officers will be elected and plans for the year's work will be discussed. Leaders of the department resigned recently when the club refused to set aside $200 to carry on the work of the department.

A tablespoonful of methylated spirit to a gallon of rinsing water will make table linen just stiff enough and glossy white, too.

Wife Does the Pinching-- Husband Spends Freely

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

Dear Miss Fairfax: I am a middle-aged married woman with a husband who doesn't drink and who doesn't beat me. He even has a good disposition. But, Miss Fairfax, I do worry about the future because my husband spends all the money he gets hold of. We have never saved anything. He is getting older and I can see it. I try to save on the grocery bill and deny myself many things, but what I save in a month he can spend in one evening.

Now, I do not feel like complaining to him because he is a good husband otherwise. He makes a good salary, but if that stopped we would have nothing. Is there anything I can do about it? LOVING WIFE.

There are thousands of cases like yours, loving wife, but not so many women who appreciate the situation. A man who deliberately fails to provide for his wife's old age and his own is not only foolish but is actually cruel.

He is saying in effect, "I don't care what happens to my wife in case I die. She can dig and scratch and manage in any old way. She can be at the mercy of anyone who has a dollar or two to throw her for the poor labor an old woman can give."

I can't believe a man who loves his wife tenderly and with any intelligence will make this mistake.

There are two things that will help: One is life insurance, or some similar saving plan, and the other is for you to handle part of his salary. There are men who won't save, who are still quite particular about paying their debts. If your husband is that kind, can't you arrange to take on obligations. Either take out life insurance for yourself that will mature in 20 years or get him to take it out. Or go into a building and loan association where you save a definite amount each month. Are you buying a home? That is a wise thing for people to do when they are not accumulating in some more profitable way.

Your husband should give you an allowance. You should buy the groceries, your clothes and anything else that you can agree upon, and he should give you a certain portion of his salary to do it with. Then you would feel repaid for your efforts at saving. It is too utterly discouraging for the wife to do all the pinching while her husband spends with a free hand. Get on a budget basis in your home and get for yourself some of the margin of money which your husband wastes. When he sees you are using it wisely, he may become more generous with you. where they attended the fifth wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Stickney on Thursday. from a European trip, is visiting Mrs. Stickney. She will return to Omaha October 2.

The wastebasket, of course. That was my first objective upon entering the bathroom where I had bandaged Dicky's hurt head. I had seen him glance furtively at it just before I had helped him back to his bedroom, and I was sure that he had thrust into the torn papers which it contained, the queer awkward bandages which had been tied around his head when he came home.

I locked the bathroom door, and then, spreading a newspaper upon the floor, tumbled the contents of the wastebasket out upon it. The thing I sought was almost at the bottom of the basket, a newspaper roughly enclosing the blood-stained bandages. That they were not the ordinary surgical bandages, I saw at once, but just what they were I could not determine. Putting the rest of the papers back in the wastebasket, I poured from the basin the solution which I had prepared for the laving of Dicky's head, filled it with cold water, and laid the bandages in it. At intervals I changed the water, until

In the days of Rhazes - Wise-Man of the East

FAVORED indeed were those who sat at the feet of Rhazes, teacher, philosopher, astronomer, physician. The fame of his wisdom and knowledge spread beyond the realms of Persia, his native land, and students came to him from far off countries.

Though the deeds of kings are lost in oblivion, and the fate of empires forgotten, passing centuries have not dimmed the name of Rhazes. For it was he who first praised coffee as a beneficent gift of Allah.

But Rhazes, wise as he was, did not dream of coffee perfection such as you enjoy in M.J.B. COFFEE.

finally I was able with the aid of warm water and soap to wash the pieces of cloth thoroughly. It was after their final rinsing that I spread them over the bathtub rim, and itemized them carefully.

Two small, cheap, but dainty feminine handkerchiefs, with no distinguishing monogram, which had been washed into balls and applied first to the wound.

A large fine linen mouchoir, which I recognized as one of Dicky's own which had been folded into small compass and laid over the others.

A long lawn collar, hemstitched, such as adorns so many ready-made cotton frocks nowadays. They are duplicated by the hundreds in every large store. I had two or three similar ones myself. I had seen one upon the frock of the girl, Molly Fasset, who had come to see Mrs. Marks, herself, sported one, as doubtless did scores of other women within a few yards of me.

The collar had been used to tie down the other bandages, and for a long minute, I stood staring at it, trying to visualize the accident in which Dicky so patently had received first aid from some woman.

That he had tried so hard to conceal the bandages, argued one of two things: Either the accident was one of which he had reason to be ashamed or else he had found me so intolerant during our life together that, no matter if his escapade were entirely innocent, he feared a scene when I should discover the feminine handkerchiefs and collar.

Woman-like, I promptly acquitted myself of the second premise, but, on the other hand, all my love of fair play protested against condemning Dicky without knowing the truth. My altruistic sentiments, however, did not prevent me from planning a Machiavellian little surprise for my husband. I resolved to stay awake the rest of the night, or rather, morning that I might send the wastebasket down to be emptied before Dicky should awaken. This would effectually prevent his knowing whether or not I had found the bandages until I should decide to enlighten him.

Moving noiselessly, I tidied up the bathroom, putting everything in its place. Then I went to the kitchen and switched on my electric iron. When it had heated sufficiently, I ironed the handkerchiefs and the collar until they were dry. Folding them neatly, I wrapped them in a piece of white paper, switched off the iron and going back to the living room hid them securely away in my own traveling bag.

Only then did the tension upon my nerves relax, and I slumped weakly down upon the bed, feeling unutterably miserable. But I did not forget my determination to stay awake until morning, and long before it was time for the janitor to make his rounds I dressed and carried the wastebasket down to his quarters and emptied it with the explanation that I needed it for the sorting of some papers.

I also side-tracked any possible curiosity he might have had by telling him of the apartment I desired for my sister-in-law's use during her brief sojourn in the city, and making an engagement with him to view the empty apartments in the building—two in number—later in the day.

Dicky was still asleep when I returned to our apartment, and I decided to do my daily marketing before I prepared breakfast that I might not be absent when he should awaken, and perhaps need me. I dressed for the street, and, going out, hurried my errands. Returning, I was particularly careful in fitting my key that I might make no noise, for I wished to have Dicky sleep as long as possible, knowing that it would be his best medicine.

I had left the living room door partly ajar, for it creaked whenever it was opened or shut, and because of my noiseless entrance, Dicky, who, attired in bathrobe and slippers was bending over the table, did not see me. And before I could speak to let him know I was there, I suddenly
