Music Division Elects Officers

Auxiliary of Omaha Woman's Club Names New Chairman—Assistants Chosen.

Mrs. Frederic Lattner.

Wounds opened to the music division of the Omaha Women's club by the resignation of the division chairman, Mrs. Willis Redfield, and her eight assistants, were healed Wednesday afternoon at a short but harmonious meeting in the Burgess-Nash auditorium.

Upon the acceptance of a report made by Mrs. J. E. Harmon, Mrs. Stanley Hall was unanimously elected president. Mrs. Hall was authorized to name her own assistants and chose Mrs. Dean Ringer, Mrs. Grace Poole Steinberg, Mrs. J. R. Cain, Jr., and Mrs. Lillian Gould Faber. Other names may be announced later.

The resignations presented at the meeting of September 14 included, besides those of Mrs. Redfield, Mrs. E. M. Anderson, Mrs. Madge West Sutphen, Mrs. Gell White McNea, Mrs. James H. Hanley, Mrs. G. Farish Jones, Mrs. J. R. Cain, Mrs. George Henderson and Mrs. Merritt Warren. Most of these resignations were precipitated by the refusal of the executive committee of the Women's club, led by Mrs. Philip Potter, president, to appropriate $200 for the work of the music department.

Mrs. Steinberg announced at this meeting that two of the resignations were handed in last spring before the question of the appropriation came up, and were not connected with it.

Wednesday's meeting lasted less than 30 minutes and was poorly attended, less than a score of the division's 103 registered members being present.

Newspaper Woman Guest

Miss Mary Seaman of Decatur, Ill., who has been the guest of Mrs. F. S. Martin, left Wednesday for Des Moines and her home. Among the hostesses who have honored her with social affairs during her stay are Mrs. Robert Uppike, who gave a luncheon Monday; Mrs. Robert Cunningham, who was a dinner hostess Tuesday; and Mrs. T. O. Cusman, also a dinner hostess.

Miss Seaman, sister of Mrs. Martin and a frequent visitor here, will return during the holidays. She is a member of the reporter staff of a Decatur (Ill.) paper. Many of her stories have been syndicated. She is specializing just now on nature feature stories.

Mr. and Mrs. Brown to Leave

Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Brown will leave in two weeks to make their home in Springfield, Mo. In compliance to Mrs. Brown, Mrs. C. D. Sturdevant will be at home at tea Friday afternoon.

Gobrecht-Gilbert

The wedding of Miss Eleanor Gilbert of Los Angeles, formerly of Council Bluffs and well known here, returning from a summer spent in New York with her mother, Mrs. Ella Mattes, she was met here by her fiancé, Olan Gobrecht, of Rawlins, Wyo., and was wed Monday at 2 in the afternoon at the First Congregational church. The Rev. Frank G. Smith performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Brewer and the bride's mother were the only guests at the nuptials. Immediately afterwards Mrs. Gobrecht and her bride left for Lake Okoboji and will reside in Rawlins.

Mrs. Ted Lohm of Lincoln, formerly Miss Ruth Beatty, is visiting her mother, Mrs. William Beatty.

mother's wedding veil, decorated the tables. Miss Morton is the granddaughter of J. Sterling Morton, author of Arbor Day. She is well known in Omaha, having attended Brownell Hall, and was graduated from Emma Willard school, Troy, N. Y. Mr. Lattner is a graduate of Williams college, Williams-town, Mass., and a graduate of law at the University of Michigan.

The young couple will reside in Dubuque following a motor trip to Quebec and Montreal. Guests from Dubuque included Messrs. and Mesdames S. B. Lattner, Louis Pasley, Mrs. Walter Pasley, Mrs. Richard Heller, Mrs. Walter Carey, Mrs. J. M. Birch and Mrs. Alfred Peaslee. Those from Chicago, Messrs. and Mesdames Wirt Morton, Joy Morton, Sterling Morton, J. M. Cudahy and Mr. Mark Morton II, Port Huron, Mich.

Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

The Way Madge Relieved Dicky's Mind About the Book.

Luckily I had not shut the hall door behind me! That was my first thought upon seeing Dicky, thinking himself alone, tear out the flyleaf of the book which had been inscribed to him. Stepping noiselessly back into the hall, I eased the door shut, and then made a tremendous clatter of unlocking it and entering again.

Dicky advanced toward me as I entered. He had had no time to sit down, but a glance told me that he had managed to replace the book upon the table.

"You must be ambitious," he said lightly, "going to market so early. May I relieve you of the parcels?"

"You'd much better sit down," I returned. "You look like a ghost."

"And feel like the devil," he reported.

"You need some breakfast," I said practically.

"Breakfast!" he gave a little shiver of repugnance. "I never want to see anything to eat again."

The little speech, and Dicky's exasperated tone were exceedingly familiar to me. He never fails to register them after eating late in the evening. In the first months of our marriage I used to make the mistake of taking him at his word, but I soon learned the futility of that procedure.

"That might be arranged," I said demurely, although I had no inclination for persiflage. "I could blind you."

"Get along with you!" Dicky growled good-naturedly, and then he indicated the book on the table with a careless gesture.

"Did you notice this?" he asked, and I was conscious that behind his apparent nonchalance he was watching me keenly.

"Another of Your Discoveries?"

"Why, I saw it lying there," I said, salving my conscience with the assurance that I was speaking the exact truth. "What is it, another of your discoveries? If it is, I warn you that I shall not even open it, or read so much as a single page. You know what happened the last time I read a book on your recommendation?"

He laughed, ostensibly at the recollection of my disgust upon that memorable occasion, but in reality, I guessed, with relief at my decision. Dicky and I rarely agree in our estimate of the current fiction writers, and we have had many a spirited, though good natured battle over novels. I congratulated myself upon my being able to use that fact to ease his mind concerning my knowledge of the book he had left upon the table.

But my frame of mind was by no means a happy one as I went out to the kitchen to prepare breakfast. His act of tearing out the inscription destroyed the faint hope I had cherished that he had not inspired the author's pen portrait of the fickle, unprincipled "Benjamin." When I topped this confirmation with the mystery concerning his wound on the head, stanchion with feminine handkerchiefs and bandaged with a woman's collar, I had a goodly-sized layer cake of doubt and suspicion ready for consumption.

I put it away from me, however, and locked it in my mental larder for the time being. I had tried and absorbing tasks ahead of me in the next few days, and I wished to keep my brain and heart free for their doing. I summoned all my common sense and will power to the task of trying to make myself believe that there was some satisfying explanation of both the book inscription and Dicky's queer accident, and succeeded to the extent of being willing to postpone judgment until I should find out the truth.

I made fresh coffee, and Dicky's favorite cereal, and prepared a grapefruit in the manner in which he likes it best. Piling fruit, flat silver, dishes, cream, sugar, butter and condiments on my tea wagon, I wheeled it into the front room and drawing up the table to the fireplace where Dicky was coaxing an apology for a blaze, I laid it quickly, and put the electric toaster on a stand near my chair.

"Breakfast in courses this morning with long waits between!" I called in railroad manner. "Come, Dicky, let's begin."

Protesting again that he could not eat, he seated himself at the table. But he discussed his grapefruit grudgingly, his cereal placidly, and when, after an interval of waiting which I soiced for him with the morning paper, I brought in a fluffy and delicately browned omelet from the kitchen, he fell upon it enthusiastically, besides stowing away two cups of coffee.

Its Powerful Grip Means Safety

When you press down the brake on a car equipped with Goodyear Tires with the All-Weather Tread, that car comes surely to a stop. Clutching, clinging, digging, the big thick sharp-edged blocks of this famous tread bite through mud or snow to solid footing beneath.

That powerful grip means safety, and it means economy, too; for it insures against spinning wheels, loss of traction and undue engine strain. Thicker than other treads, the All-Weather Tread is now beveled and made of an even tougher rubber compound, affording the utmost in long and economical wear.

If you want security under your car, now and in the winter months ahead, get the new Goodyear Cord Tires with the All-Weather Tread.

As Goodyear Service Station Dealers we sell and recommend the new Goodyear Cords with the beveled All-Weather Tread and back them up with standard Goodyear Service
