

Women Are Told to Take Interest in Party Politics

Must Exercise Right to Use Ballot, Voters' League Official Says in Address Here.

"Now that you women have the vote you must find a place for it in your lives," said Miss Belle Sherwin of Cleveland, first vice president of the National League of Women Voters, in her address on "Attaching the Interest to Women in Government" at a luncheon given in her honor Tuesday noon at the Chamber of Commerce by the Omaha league. The speaker was introduced by the president, Mrs. R. E. McKelvy.

"The League of Women Voters urges women to affiliate with their political parties and to become good members," Miss Sherwin stated. "If you are to have efficiency in government you must first create efficient citizens, study your charters and find out what makes capable officials. To stipulate thought, hold schools close to political events, using the subject of the event for discussion. Study the government of other communities and if the government in your town is 'scrap it' and build afresh."

"The League of Women Voters is the first organization having leagues linked together all over the country in a nation-wide study of citizenship," the speaker concluded.

Miss Sherwin is enroute to Aurora to attend the state meeting of the league Friday and Saturday. She will be honor guest and speaker at a dinner Wednesday evening at the University club given by the Omaha Wesleyan college club. Miss Sherwin is a member of the board of directors of Wesleyan college.

One hundred and fifty members and friends, including a dozen men, prominent among them W. F. Baxter and J. H. Beveridge, attended the luncheon.

New Highway Improves Kearney-Hastings Road

Kearney, Neb., Oct. 2.—The road between Hastings and Kearney has been greatly improved by the construction of a new highway from Newark south, extending to the D. L. D. This road cuts through the sandhills, a stretch that was almost impassable for years. Many large hills have been constructed and for quite a distance the new road is surfaced with gravel. This road also connects with the Fort Kearney drive. A movement is now on foot to gravel surface the latter. When completed it will be one of the most beautiful drives in the state.

Believe Farm Hand, Dazed, Was Shocked by Lightning

Albion, Neb., Oct. 2.—Joe Hickman, 18, working on the Deitsch farm near Boone, was evidently shocked by lightning during a severe storm. He had gone horseback into a pasture and after the storm the horse came back riderless. Search was made and the boy was found unconscious, remaining so for several hours. Since regaining consciousness he has been in a dazed condition and unable to tell what happened. A physician's diagnosis indicates a shock by lightning.

Nebraska Family of 18 Takes Prize on Auto Day

Falls City, Neb., Oct. 2.—Mr. and Mrs. Everett Rowell of Barada had no difficulty in establishing their claim to having the largest family in the auto day parade, the feature of the closing day of the annual county livestock fair. They brought their 16 children along with them in cars.

Burgess Bedtime Stories

Quick legs will lose to quicker wit: You always may be sure of it. —Peter Rabbit.

Peter Gains Blacky's Respect.

Blacky the Crow grew more and more excited as he looked down on the race between Peter Rabbit and a strange dog. It was an exciting race. There was no doubt about that. Peter's white tail was bobbing along just in front of the nose of that yelping dog.

There is little that the sharp eyes of Blacky the Crow miss. He saw the little hole in the hedge for which Peter was heading. He saw that it was just big enough for Peter to go through, but too small for that dog to go through. "Run, Peter! Run!" cawed Blacky, for it did look as if that dog would catch Peter before he could reach that hedge.

But what Blacky didn't know was that Peter wasn't running his fastest. He had a reason for this. He wanted that dog to be right at his very heels when he reached that hedge, so, glancing back over his shoulders, he kept watch of that dog and ran only just fast enough to keep out of his jaws.

They were almost to the hedge, and Blacky the Crow began to feel relieved. If Peter once got through that hedge he would be safe. That is what Blacky thought. Clever as he is, he had quite forgotten that that dog could jump that hedge. So, of course Blacky expected to see Peter drive through that little hole. But he saw nothing of the kind. No, sir, he saw nothing of the kind.

Peter reached that hole hardly half a jump ahead of that dog. But, instead of diving through that hole, Peter made one of those quick turns for which he is famous. It was done so quickly that the dog didn't even see him do it. The dog had seen that hole in the hedge and expected Peter to dive through it. He had a plan of his own, had that dog. Just at the instant he expected Peter to dive through that hole he himself jumped over the hedge. Of course, he lifted his eyes to do this. He expected to land on Peter when he came out on the other side. So, having lifted his eyes in order to see where he was jumping, he didn't see Peter make that quick turn.

Never was there a more surprised dog than was that one when he landed on the ground on the other side of that hedge and saw nothing of Peter Rabbit. He didn't know what to make of it at all. He was sure that Peter had dived through that hole. He had expected to land on Peter when he came out on the other side. He was sure that he had planned his jump so that he could not fall. But he hadn't landed on Peter, and no Peter was in sight. The dog looked up along the hedge, he looked down along the hedge. There wasn't a sign of Peter Rabbit. Then he ran a little way up along the hedge with his nose to the ground. Then he turned and ran down a little way with his nose to the ground. There was no scent of Peter Rabbit.

All the time Peter had been running as fast as his long legs could take him. He had been running twice as fast as he had run with the dog behind him. By the time the dog had recovered his wits and jumped back over the hedge Peter had reached the end of it and was back on Farmer

They were almost to the edge, and Blacky the Crow began to feel relieved.

Brown's land. In fact, he was safely in an old hole once dug by Johnny Chuck.

"Caw, caw, caw!" shrieked Blacky the Crow delightedly. "Peter is smarter than I thought. Yes, sir, he is smarter than I thought."
