Miss Edna Birss to Wed

The marriage of Miss Edna Allen Birss, formerly of Omaha, and Capt. Herbert Baldwin of St. Louis, Mo., will be solemnized at Kansas City on Saturday, October 6, at 4 o'clock p. m.

The wedding ceremony will be performed at the Lincoln boulevard Methodist Episcopal church by the pastor, the Rev. Benjamin Young.

The bride, who is the daughter of the late Frank J. Birss and Mrs. Birss, is a graduate of Brownell Hall, class of 1917, and lived in Omaha until last spring, when she moved to Lincoln with her mother, Mrs. J. Birss, who is on the state board of control.

Captain Baldwin, formerly stationed at Omaha, is finance officer at Jefferson Barracks, Mo., and is also of the government arsenal in St. Louis. He is the son of the late Col. W. H. Baldwin and Mrs. Baldwin of Philadelphia.

The bride will wear a gown of sapphire blue chiffon velvet, draped effect, drapery caught up on side with rhinestone buckles; the hat will be of silver lace and velvet of shade harmonizing with the gown. The corsage will be orchids and pink roses.

The wedding will be attended only by close friends and relatives. Among those who will be present are Mrs. Frank J. Birss and Mrs. Esther M. Allen of Lincoln, mother and grandmother of the bride; Major and Mrs. E. F. Ely of Omaha, and H. W. Blodgett of St. Louis.

After the ceremony an informal reception will be held in the private suite of the bride's mother at the Muehlebach hotel, followed by a wedding dinner.

After an eastern trip Captain and Mrs. Baldwin will be at home at 4907 West Pine boulevard, St. Louis, Mo.

Altrusa Luncheon

Mrs. Wallace Reid Honor Guest—Members From Bluffs Attend.

In a private dining room at the Burgess-Nash tea room Altrusa club entertained at luncheon Tuesday, with Mrs. Wallace Reid as the honor guest. Covers were placed for 43. Larkspur, pink roses and white cosmos were used for table decorations. Dr. Amelia Brandt, president of the woman's division of the Chamber of Commerce, and Miss Pearl Jenks, vice president of the Business Women's club, were among the guests.

Altrusans attending from Council Bluffs were Misses Bess Battey, Mary O'Neill, J. McIntire, Dr. Charlotte McCluskey and Dr. Erickson Hill.

Mrs. Mary Marston Kinsey, president of Omaha Altrusa, presented Mrs. Reid, who addressed the club.

"Drug addicts are sick people and should be treated as such," said Mrs. Reid. "There are 2,000,000 of them in our country, as nearly as can be estimated, and only 15 per cent of this number are from the lower world. The others come from all walks of life. They are not weak-willed people. They are diseased and in need of expert medical attention. Instead of providing it, we leave them to the mercies of commercial traffic."

"I have seen the discharge papers of soldiers," said Mrs. Reid, "which showed they had become addicted to drugs in certain hospitals, their lives perhaps depending upon the administration. They are turned loose to fight the habit alone. If caught with a drug on their person their compensation is cut off. Eventually they are placed in jails or penitentiaries. Disgrace and death are all that are left."

"The horrible things about drug addiction should not be over-emphasized," said Mrs. Reid, "but we should approach the evil with sane intelligence, and make a scientific and honest effort to cure its victims."

"My Husband's Love"

Why Madge Felt Uneasy About That Second Apartment.

"Vell! Vell! dia is nice. You come down to keep the mama company, yes?"

Mr. Schwartz rubbed his plump hands together unctiously, while his jolly rubicund face above his tubby figure beamed approval of my presence in his kitchen.

"Ottol! where have you been so long? his wife asked sharply. "Missis Graham is in a fery great hurry, and she has been waiting for you."

If she had said "the queen," or "the first lady" she could have put no greater deference into her voice. There was also in her tones the con-jugal disapproval which only an elderly spouse of many years' experience can express perfectly.

"I could not help it," her husband returned querulously. "Dot old lady in the first floor, left No. 2, kept me half an hour making a fuss because she have not enough heat, she says. I told her nobody else was kicking, and she said nobody else have spunk enough to say a word to me. She called me a lazy old loser. Vot do you think of that, Minna?"

That he was annoyed by his experience was clear, but I saw something else also—that he possessed that rare panacea for all ills, a genuine sense of humor. He was bubbling over with amusement at the memory of his tenant's peculiarities. That his conscience was as well fortified against criticism, I was certain, for he was a rara avis among janitors in his consideration for the comfort of the tenants.

some of it in the company of my janitor's lonely wife.

"My Foot Minna!" "Dot old woman!" she exclaimed with an intonation which removed the offending tenant to the other side of the continent. "You should spend goot time talking mit her! She iss crazy und she iss all the time fussy about somedings. Now go Mrs. Graham iss in a great hurry, for she iss going to cook a big dinner for company down on our stove here. Und you better get all your work out of the way, so you can carry thing up und down for her."

I opened my mouth to protest, but closed it again as quickly. Mrs. Schwartz plainly had taken my dinner into her own keeping, and it behooved me to trail meekly along in her wake.

"My! My! Dot will be nice!" Mr. Schwartz beamed approval of the scheme as he turned to lead the way to the apartments I had wished to inspect. Once out of his wife's sight and hearing, however, he became suddenly grave.

"I am very glad you asked her to cook dinner down mit her," he said with a grateful intonation. "She gets so lonesome, my poor Minna, sitting down here, and the doctors say she vill never be much better of her pains."

His voice was heavy with the tragedy of elderly married couples sincerely attached to each other, the awful fear of separation by death I tried to inject into my necessarily perfunctory answer the sincere sympathy I felt.

Madge Makes a Choice. "But doctors are so often mistaken, Mr. Schwartz," I protested. "And while I am here, I promise you she shall not be lonesome any longer."

It was a resolve I had made when I saw the pathetic pleasure the old woman took in the prospect of having my companionship while my dinner was cooking. I had much leisure time even with the care of the tiny apartment, and I meant to spend

It was much like the apartment Dicky and I occupied, and it shone with the same cleanliness which had been the deciding factor with me when renting our apartment. But looking at its general cheapness of effect, and the atrocious furniture and curtains, I wondered apprehensively what my fastidious sister-in-law would say to my selection. If it were Elizabeth now—I could visualize the lofty contempt with which my other sister-in-law would view both the apartment and me. But Harriet, whom I like as cordially as I dislike her sister, possesses a goodly amount of common sense, and I fervently hoped that she would bring her full complement of the possession with her.

But it was with distinct misgivings that I paid Mr. Schwartz a deposit, and went back upstairs to prepare for my shopping expedition.

Immigration Expert Speaks. Miss Lillian P. Clark of Washington, D. C., consulting specialist in adult immigrant education under the United States bureau of naturalization, who has been conducting an Americanization institute in Omaha this week, gave her last talk last evening at 7:30 o'clock in the council chamber of the city hall. Miss Clark came to Omaha at the invitation of J. H. Beveridge, superintendent of public education, and Miss Ella Thorngate, supervisor of Americanization in the schools. Miss Clark is en route to Washington, D. C., from San Francisco.

A "Fifth Avenue" for Omaha

Experts predict St. Mary's Avenue will eventually be to Omaha what Fifth Avenue is to New York and what Michigan Boulevard is to Chicago.

Present development in Omaha's St. Mary's Avenue district is similar in practically all respects to developments that made Fifth Avenue in New York, and Michigan Boulevard in Chicago.

A study of developments in other cities shows what may be expected in our own city. Until recent years Fifth Avenue and Michigan Boulevard were lined with residences.

In a short time these residences were replaced with distinctive retail shops, catering to "automobile trade." The "automobile trade" means those that have a buying power above the average.

Movements of this kind occur because merchants making the "quality appeal" are in the midst of stores making the "price appeal."

Owners of Aquila Court building will not permit any tenants in the Court that do not meet the high standards suggested by the Aquila Court trademark, both in quality of merchandise and in character of service

Showing where the distinctive and beautiful Aquila Court Buildings will be located. (Photograph of Aquila Court in exact perspective, though building not yet complete.)

Feature Quality Goods.

Aquila Court Buildings will enable Omaha's widely scattered "Quality Stores" to come together in a well-located restricted district.

Completion of the St. Mary's Avenue development project, and the building now being done in this district, are in line with Fifth Avenue and Michigan Boulevard developments.

Change Is Inevitable.

Realtors handling downtown property know that a change must take place. The shopping district cannot be confined indefinitely to the small area now occupied by retail business.

The creation of a "Quality District" is a good medium for spreading retail business over a large area.

(The time for the retail district to spill over its old boundaries has arrived. The St. Mary's Avenue development solves the retail district extension problem for the future. The erection of Aquila Court provides the facilities that exclusive shopkeepers and high-class professional men and women need at the present time.)
