Women Voters Want on Juries

Complete Legal Equality and Joint Ownership of Property Advocated at Aurora Convention.

Aurora, Neb., Oct. 4.—In the first session of the Nebraska League of Women Voters in state convention the state council recommended strongly that women be called for jury service and that laws be passed establishing absolute equality in property matters between men and women.

This recommendation will go before the convention. Mrs. J. P. Senning of Lincoln presided today. Many delegates have already reached Aurora.

A legislative program including joint ownership of property by husband and wife and removal of the party circle from election ballots, was proposed by the board of directors and council of the league. The board, it was stated, also will probably recommend a study of child labor problems, particularly with regard to conditions in the sugar beet fields.

Miss Mary Doyle Returns From Bankers' Meet

Miss Mary Doyle, manager of the women's department of the Omaha National bank, has returned from Atlantic City, where she was a delegate to the first general convention of the Association of Bank Women, which was held in connection with the 49th annual convention of the American Bankers' association.

Forty-three delegates from all over the United States were present, making Haddon Hall their headquarters, with their committee room at the entrance to the auditorium where many of the sessions of the American Bankers' association were held.

Attention was drawn to this fact by Leroy Mershon, deputy manager of the Omaha National bank, at the meeting of the trust company division with the suggestion that many of the bankers unfamiliar with the work of the Association of Bank Women might call at their convenient headquarters to question the officers and members and consider the advisability of either officially recognizing the merit of women already employed in their institutions or placing women in positions, as he had knowledge of the value to the various banks and trust companies of their executive women.

The membership of the Association of Bank Women is limited to executives, such as officers in banks and trust companies, manager of women's departments, managers of savings departments, etc.

The sessions of the Association of Bank Women were arranged so that they would not conflict with those of the American Bankers' association and that the women might have the opportunity of being present.

The business sessions of the women were enlivened with a luncheon at the Chalfonte hotel and a banquet at the Hotel Ambassador. The speakers at the banquet were Miss Lucile Atchison, secretary of embassies, Department of State, Washington, D. C.; Miss Mary Reeves, who had just returned from a survey of savings institutions abroad; and J. H. Pletcher, president of the American Bank association.

Miss Hillier Heads Girls' Community League.

Miss Frances Hillier was elected president of the Girls' Community Service league at the annual meeting last Saturday. Miss Modjeska Shear has been chosen vice president; Miss Enger Kollie, secretary, and Miss Polly Ryan, treasurer. Members of the advisory board are Harry S. Byrne, chairman; Judge Howard Kennedy, secretary treasurer; Mrs. Sarah Joslyn, Mrs. W. E. Bollin, J. L. Niederst, John W. Robbins and O. T. Alvinson.

The league will entertain at a dancing party Saturday evening at the club rooms in the Gardner building, 1712 Dodge street.

For Mr. and Mrs. Bucholz.

Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Bucholz will be honor guests at a bridge tea which Mrs. Bucholz's parents, the John W. Tow and her sister, Miss Marion, will give Saturday evening. Twenty-eight guests have been invited.

For Mrs. Ayrcrigg.

Mrs. Fred Daugherty will be hostess at luncheon Saturday for Mrs. Edward Ayrcrigg of Norfolk, the guest of her mother, Mrs. R. S. Hall.

Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

"I found the poultry shop fully up to Mrs. Schwartz's recommendation and selected two plump roasting chickens, the firm flesh and fresh color of which assured me that I could prepare them appetizingly for my fastidious guests.

With the knowledge that I had no time to waste in having my purchases delivered, I had bought an old-fashioned market basket at a shop I had passed, and stowing away the chickens in it, I made my way home again, stopping at a grocery, a fruit and vegetable store, bakery and a fishmonger's on my way.

I took everything with me in the basket except the oysters, which the fishmonger promised to open and deliver ready for serving on the half shell at 6:30. I planned my dinner for that hour because it was then that I expected the Braithwaites, Lillian and Marion would get in at 5, but I knew I could give Lillian a cup of tea and Marion a glass of milk to tide them over until dinnertime.

The basket was a load, indeed, when I had placed my last purchase in it, and I was conscious of curious glances from passers-by as I laboriously covered the last block of my journey, stopping every few feet to shift the weight of the basket from one hand to the other.

"For the love of Lulu, drop that thing!"

Dicky's voice, low but irritated, sounded from the open door of a taxicab which had just drawn up to the curb. He alighted as he spoke, and before I could gather my bewildered faculties together to obey him he had snatched the offending basket from my hand and deposited it on the pavement with a thump which would have effectually demolished anything breakable, had there been such an article in it. Then he thrust a bill at the taxicab driver.

"Keep the change," he said shortly, "and carry this thing to the second floor of that apartment house."

He indicated the house with a flourish of his stick, and cut short the man's voluble thanks by turning away from him.

"What the devil are you trying to do?" he demanded, falling into step with me. "Are you practicing for the movie role of a charming little housewife going marketing, or what?"

I reflected wryly that I might as well have taken a taxi to market. Dicky had given me a ridiculously extravagant tip to the driver, and was besides, in a most captious mood. But I placatingly explained about the impending arrival of the Braithwaites, Lillian and Marion. He stopped short on the steps of the apartment and frowned forebodingly.

"You don't mean to tell me you're going to be idiot enough to try to get dinner in that dump upstairs!"

"Suppose we wait to discuss it until we reach our rooms," I murmured as a woman coming down the steps turned to stare at us.

He made no answer, and to my great relief he did not speak again until he had finished his sly agent of the stairs and had dismissed the taxi driver. Then he issued his ultimatum:

You don't need Turkey to enjoy Cranberries—

Great with Roast Pork!

Delicious cranberry sauce—made in ten minutes makes the finest relish with roast pork—and promotes digestion!

When served with any kind of meat, cranberry sauce gives zest to the whole meal and helps balance the diet. Here's the proper way to make cranberry sauce—

Ten-Minute Cranberry Sauce

One quart cranberries, two cups boiling water, 1½ to 2 cups sugar. Boil sugar and water together for five minutes; skim; add the cranberries and boil without stirring (five minutes usually suffices) until all the skins are broken. Remove from the fire when the popping stops.

And when you have the cranberry sauce, you can easily and quickly make many delicious desserts, such as cranberry pie, pudding, short-cake, tarts, etc.

To be sure of getting the choicest cultivated varieties, ask for Eatmor Cranberries. The red and blue trade-mark label is on all barrels and boxes.

And always cook cranberries in porcelain-lined or aluminum vessels.
