

Many Kinds of Flowers May Be Grown Indoors

Lincoln, Oct. 14.—Hyacinths, paper Nebraska Agriculture college. In a and even tulips may be grown in doors with a fair degree of success, according to horticulturists at the Nebraska Agriculture College. In a bulletin, just issued, the horticulture professors give the methods of planting and care of these flowers, when they are to be grown inside. The bulletin follows, in part:

They may be grown either in water or dirt. To grow the bulbs in water, the bowl or vase should be partly filled with gravel, rock or cial, together with a small amount of oyster shell. They the bulbs are placed firmly among the stones, partly covered with water and removed to a cool, dark part of the cellar, while the roots are forming. They should be left there about six to eight weeks, the water being changed every week. At the end of this period they should be brought into the light and into a heated room to flower. The bulbs may be grown in pots also, a six-inch pot being suitable for three bulbs. The pot should be filled with garden soil in which a cupful of sand has been mixed and a little fertilizer. The bulbs are set just beneath the surface of the soil, watered and moved to a cool, dark, moist place, such as a cave, or out-of-doors under a covering of dirt, straw or ashes. Here they are left six to eight weeks and then gradually brought into heat." Sol Hess directs "The Nebbs," an exclusive feature in The Evening

Suffering is often wrought just because of lack of thought.

—Farmer Brown's Boy.

The Wounded Young Bob White. The hunter, who had wounded one of Bob White's children and had given all the family such a terrible fright, did not return to Farmer Brown's land. Farmer Brown's boy was keeping too sharp a watch. You see that hunter knew that were he caught actually hunting on the land he would be arrested, for that land was protected by signs forbidding all hunting.

So, the hunter went elsewhere and gave no thought to the Bob Whites on Farmer Brown's land, save to regret that there was no chance to kill some of them. "I hit one of them anyway," said he to himself, as he and his dog hunted in other fields. And from the way in which he said it you would have known that he was glad he had not missed altogether. He actually was glad that he had wounded one of those harmless birds. Yes, sir, he was glad.

This sounds very dreadful. In a way it is very dreadful. But that hunter, who was hardly more than a boy, was not naturally cruel. You see it was all thoughtlessness. He loved the sport of hunting. He loved to make a good shot. It never entered his head to think of those he shot at as having feelings exactly like his own. He didn't think of that wounded Bob White as suffering pain and fright. Had he thought of it in this way he would have been greatly troubled because he had wounded one of them.

Meanwhile the poor little wounded Bob White was suffering. His back had been badly torn by the cruel shot. He was a very sick-feeling young bird. He felt too badly to even worry about himself. All he wanted was to keep perfectly quiet. He felt so badly that he didn't really care what did happen to him.

But if he didn't worry about himself his mother and father worried about him enough to make up for it. You see they understood that, though the danger from the hunter was over, other dangers were increased. The young Bob White couldn't fly. It might be some time before he would be able to fly. Until he could fly he would be in constant danger of being found by one of his enemies. Then he would be helpless.

"I shall have to stay right with him," said Mrs. Bob White to Bob

Worn Velvet Should Be Steamed and Brushed

Perhaps you have a velvet hat which you would like to wear again but it is crushed. The Nebraska Agricultural College has special hints that without ripping the hat apart, it may be renewed by first brushing thoroughly to remove dust, then shaking it over a steaming teakettle. The steam will lift the pile and brighten the luster.

If the velvet is to be used in making another hat, it should be brushed thoroughly to remove the dust. Then, with the wrong side down, draw it across a hot iron covered with two or three folds of damp cloth. As you work, brush the pile along the nap with a soft brush. Care should be taken not to steam the velvet too much in any spot. When the pile becomes wet it can not be lifted again.

Badly crushed velvet may be panned. First dampen it on the wrong side. Then place it on the board with wrong side up, ironing lightly with the nap. Do not let the iron rest for a second on the material or it will leave a mark.

A COMMON COLD DESERVES YOUR PROMPT ATTENTION

Take Father John's Medicine. A common cold deserves your immediate and serious attention! So writes a well-known physician, in pointing out the danger of neglecting a cold. Early treatment of a cold will spare you days of suffering and danger. He says, "Doctors tell you that colds are very likely to develop into serious and even fatal diseases if they are neglected. Many doctors prescribe Father John's Medicine because they know it has had over 65 years of success for colds and coughs. It builds new strength to throw off the cold and prevents its development into more serious trouble. No drugs—all pure food."
