

WOMAN'S NEWS-FEATURES

Martha Allen PROBLEMS THAT PERPLEX.

Mrs. H. B. Write to Mrs. Edward Johnson, Woman's Exchange, 1517 Douglas street. It is operated by the Omaha Woman's club. They will sell your hand work, retaining 20 per cent of the sale price. They are also glad to get home cooked food, especially cakes, pies, bread and jellies. I'm sure they would be interested in the children's dresses and house dresses.

Bertha: If you decide upon the coat and dress you will not need a three-piece suit. If I were you I would get a dark blue crepe dress that could be worn afternoons and as a dinner gown. You will need a dress of this kind as well as the formal evening gown. Velvet would be lovely, but, remember, it is not as practical as a crepe or soft satin, which could be worn the year round.

George: It is very plain that the girl is "trying to let you down easy," as they say. Pay no attention to her for the present. Try to interest yourself in others. If she sees that you are having just as good a time without her she may find that she really cares for you.

Dr. Cutter to Europe.

Dr. Irving S. Cutter leaves November 1 for Europe, where he will meet Dr. and Mrs. LeRoy Crummer in England. The two doctors will tour England and Scotland together and Dr. Cutter, after Dr. Crummer's departure for the states, will spend several months in Europe at medical studies.

Rummage Sale.

Ladies of St. John Episcopal church will hold a rummage sale, Saturday, October 20, at Thirty-first and Q streets.

Chief of Children's Bureau to Speak Here

Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the children's bureau, Department of Labor, Washington D. C., will be honor guest and speaker at a luncheon given by the Omaha Woman's club Saturday at 12:30 o'clock at the Y. W. C. A. Reservations, which are open to the public, may be made with Mrs. Joseph Bushman, Walnut 2676.

Miss Abbott had much of her early experience in social work at Hull house in Chicago, where she was a resident from 1908 to 1915. Prior to that time she taught in the high school of her native town, Grand Island, Neb. For two years she was director of the child labor division of the United States children's bureau, and in 1921 was appointed to succeed Miss Julia Lathrop as chief of the bureau. Miss Abbott has always been deeply interested in problems relating to immigrants. She was for five years director of the Immigrants' Protective league, and in 1920 to 1921 was executive secretary of the Illinois immigrants' commission. She is author of "The Immigrant and the Community."

Miss Abbott was chosen president of the national conference of social workers at the 50th anniversary conference held in Washington, D. C., last May.

L. O. E. Bowling League Resumes Activities.

The L. O. E. Bowling league will meet Friday, 2 p. m., at the Harney street bowling alley, Twentieth and Harney streets. Members who plan to attend the meeting are requested to call Mrs. Pratt Harwood. L. O. E. chapter No. 1 initiated a class of 25 at their meeting Wednesday evening in the Elk club rooms. Following the initiation a program was given including readings by Mrs. Camille Elliott, and song and dance numbers by the Misses Lillian and Agnes Bredin, accompanied by their mother, Mrs. Joseph Bredin.

Tomato juice will remove ink stains from fingers.

War Mothers' President Known Here.

Mrs. H. H. McCluer of Kansas City, Mo., who has been elected president of the National War Mothers of America, has been a frequent visitor in Omaha at the home of her sister, Mrs. S. E. Schweitzer at the Knickerbocker apartments.

Mrs. McCluer was the first woman to carry the electoral vote to Washington, preceding Mrs. H. H. Wheeler and Mrs. Draper Smith of Nebraska, who had the same honor in 1921. She is a member of the League of Women Voters in Missouri and is a republican.

Mrs. Schweitzer entertained for her sister at the Omaha club when she made her last visit here a year ago last April. Mrs. McCluer is expected here this winter to visit her sister, and Mrs. W. A. Wilcox, who is also a war mother.

Tuesday Musical Tickets Reserved Oct. 29.

Membership seat sale for Sigrid Omeig, contralto for the Metropolitan Opera company who will sing at the Brandeis, Sunday afternoon, Nov. 4, under Tuesday Musical auspices, will be open to members at the box office of the theater Monday, Oct. 29. Members may reserve five seats only, in addition to their own. Extra-tickets may be purchased at the same time. There is no war tax. Public sale of tickets will open November 1.

Amateur Musical Club.

The Amateur Musical club will meet with Mrs. W. A. Gordon Friday afternoon.

Miss Dorothy Dahman leaves Saturday for Youngstown, O., where she will be maid of honor to Miss Eleanor McClure. Miss McClure and Miss Dahman were freshmen roommates at Smith college. Miss Dahman expects to go east after the ceremony for a short visit in Boston and Philadelphia.

Randall Brown will leave Nov. 4 for the wedding of Miss Edith Locke and Earl Gannett which takes place in New York, Nov. 7. Mr. Brown will be best man for Mr. Gannett. He will return immediately.

Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

Lillian Wanted to Go to a Hotel. Lillian rushed at me with characteristic impetuosity as Dicky ushered her into the room. Dicky had the smaller bags and behind him was the taxi driver, laden with suit cases. But Lillian carried several small parcels which I guessed she feared to intrust to the proverbial carelessness of masculine hands, and despite her apparent haste, she managed to deposit them safely upon the table before she swept me into her arms.

"Oh! it's good! good! to see you again," she ejaculated, embracing me warmly. "Let's have a look at you!" She held me off at arm's length, inspected me gravely. "How do you do it, Madge? You're prettier every time I see you. And you have the color no rouge can paint."

She hummed the atrocious parody tunelessly, and Dicky struck in with a provoking grin.

"That's not natural color, ear heart, that's the flush of righteous anger mantling her fair cheek. I just smashed 20 or 40 cents' worth of glass and cold cream tubes in the bedroom, trying to get out a collar from the gimcracks, and her repressed emotions are making her apoplectic."

Lillian shot an inquiring significant glance at me. I was filled with mischief, and I prepared to play up to anything she might say.

You'll Be Pleased

"I hope these antique things I picked up for you in the Italian quarter weren't among them," she said solicitously.

"I am afraid they were," I replied dolefully with an inward grin at the remembrance of the inexpensive, easily replaced, but oddly attractive little dishes to which she referred.

"Then I thank you for the high value you are pleased to place upon my gifts," Lillian threw this over her shoulder to Dicky, whose face lengthened ludicrously.

"Oh! I say, Lill, honest, were they gifts from you? I'm mighty sorry. Can't they be duplicated? Madge, where did you put the pieces? I'll spend all my waking hours in those shops down there."

"They're in the waste basket in the kitchen," I said coldly, for the contrast between his indifference to the breakage when he thought I only was concerned and his present solicitude was enough to chill the tones of any wife's voice. I wonder if most married women have the experience of hearing courteous language spoken to everyone else except themselves. To do Dicky justice, however, he is the soul of courtesy to me when he is in a good humor. But I notice that no matter how angry he may be, he is able to control his temper if someone like Lillian, whose opinion he values, happens in.

Dicky started toward the door with the evident intention of searching for the pieces. But with a patent second thought, he whirled quickly, and caught the delighted smirk on Lillian's face, and its slower reflection on my own.

"I thought so," he said. "I just happened to remember the teamwork which you two think so neat. But your Uncle Ephraim was just a little bit too quick on the draw for you just a little bit too quick."

Lillian surveyed him coolly with hands set lightly at her sides. "The trouble with you Dicky-bird," she began, but what else she said did not hear, for Marion's soft voice sounded close to me.

"Don't you think I've waited long enough for a hug, Auntie Madge?" I swept Lillian's adorable young daughter into my arms, and hugged her with enthusiasm.

"I'll answer your first question before you ask it," I told her when I had released her. "Junior is all right. He had a bad attack of croup, while I came back, and a telephone from the farm this morning told me he was quite himself again."

"Oh! I'm so glad—he's better. I mean," she amended with pretty childish confusion. "I can hardly wait until I see him. I've brought him some things, too."

She indicated the packages she and her mother had carried with so much care, and was untying one of the strings when Lillian stopped her.

"What's this the Dicky bird's cheeping concerning the arrival of the Braithwaites in an hour? Why on earth didn't you tell me? I had planned to go out to the farm in the morning, anyway, and we'll just call a taxi and vamoose over to a hotel for the night."
