

Swedish Church Head to Talk Here

Archbishop Soderblom Will Be Guest in Omaha November 2 and 3.

Archbishop Nathan Soderblom, next to the king supreme head of the State church of Sweden, and ecclesiastical prince of the National Lutheran church of Sweden, internationally celebrated as scholar, linguist and administrator, will be the guest of Omaha November 2 and 3.

Civic and church organizations have planned meetings and entertainment for the archbishop, culminating in a public luncheon to be held at the Chamber of Commerce at noon Saturday, November 3, under auspices of the Noon Day club.

The archbishop speaks English and several other languages fluently. He is the ruling prince of the church and lives in a palace at Upsala, Sweden. The archbishop has risen from a parish preacher and missionary to his present eminence, and is democratic and simple in his manner and tastes. He is vice chancellor of the universities of Upsala and Lund and lecturer on comparative religions at the University of Leipzig.

Appendicitis Victim

Beatrice, Neb., Oct. 22.—Rudolph Jantzen, young son of John Jantzen, a farmer living southeast of Plymouth, died at a hospital following an operation for appendicitis.

COLDS THAT DEVELOP INTO PNEUMONIA

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements, which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrh of bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Ga.

Bobbed Haired Coed Is Chosen as 'Miss Dakota'

Vermillion, S. D., Oct. 22.—All eyes on "Miss Dakota." Alice Jackson, the most adored coed in the University of South Dakota, elected by her fellow students to represent the university and the state this year, on Dakota day, October 27 at the annual homecoming and the day of the great football classic with the state college.

"Miss Dakota," as queen of the day, will ride in a beautifully decorated float, leading a mammoth parade of students, alumni and faculty over a two-mile route through Vermillion streets.

"Miss Dakota," whose home is in Ipswich, was born and reared in South Dakota. She is 21 years old, a senior in the college of arts and sciences and is majoring in English. She is of medium height, graceful, with dark brown bobbed hair and brown eyes, and a winning smile. Not only is she a good student, but she is an outdoor girl, fond of tennis, swimming, horse-back riding and dancing. She is considered the most active girl on the campus, particularly in dramatic circles, and is a member of the Mask and Wig Dramatic club, and of Theta Alpha Phi, national dramatic society, and has several times distinguished herself in university dramatic performances.

Cozad Busy With Sugar Beet Crop

Will Ship More Than 1,000 Carloads From There This Season.

Cozad, Neb., Oct. 22.—These are busy days in the sugar beet industry at Cozad and vicinity. An average of 15 carloads of beets are being loaded and shipped every day from here to Grand Island. This is the second season for raising sugar beets in this territory and the experiment has proved very satisfactory. The soil and climate are ideal for this industry. It is estimated that more than 1,000 carloads of sugar beets will be shipped from here this season. In addition to the beet industry, large shipments of hay, grain, cattle, sheep and various kinds of merchandise are handled here. One day recently 89 carloads of livestock, grain and merchandise were handled here, which is considered an exceptional record for a town of 2,000 inhabitants.

K. S. P. Highway Will Be Called North-South Pike

Kearney, Neb., Oct. 22.—For the second time within a few months the K. S. P. highway name has been changed. In the future the road will be known as the North-South pike and federal and state aid project No. 10. The road extends from Athol, Kan., to Pierre, S. D. The entire mileage across the state is a federal and state aid road, or such aid has been designated with the exception of that portion through Kearney county. The road through this region, however, is in excellent shape.

Former Harvard Pastor Called to South Omaha

Harvard, Neb., Oct. 22.—Rev. Barton A. Johnson, who was pastor of the local Christian church about a year ago, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the South Side Christian church of Omaha, according to word received here. He took up post-graduate work during his stay here.

WOMAN'S NEWS-FEATURES

Queens Appear in Style Show

Misses Eleanor Burkley and Claire Daugherty, a reigning queen and a past queen of Ak-Sar-Ben, will be two of the 16 Junior league girls who will appear in a style show at the Overseas Girls' Armistice carnival. The league as an organization has taken over the style show and the flower market, each group to include 16 members. Mrs. Harry Byrns of the Overseas and the Junior leagues is in charge of these groups.

Miss Marion Towle, president of the Junior league, has appointed Mrs. Clyde Roeder as chairman of the style show, and Miss Gladys Peters for the flower girls. Herzberg will furnish the gowns.

Miss Gladys Peters will give a tea for both groups at her home Monday afternoon, October 4. Flower girls will have most attractive costumes. A costume has already been designed for this; the trimmings will be bottles of perfume. With the costume will be worn a necklace girle and bracelet of tiny bottles. Purchasers will be privileged to detach trimmings for coins. A lollipop girl will be dressed as a lollipop, and, according to the committee in charge, "will sell 'em, too."

Omahans Are Principals and Assistants at Out-of-Town Weddings

A dull social calendar for the week in Omaha, is to be enlivened with affairs in Lincoln, and Omahans are emigrating almost daily for the gaieties there.

Monday a large party motored over to attend the dinner dance given by the Ross P. Curtices in honor of their daughter, Helen, and Chauncey Abbott, Jr., of this city, who are to wed next Monday evening. The wedding will be a very quiet one, with Mrs. Norman Curtice, formerly of Omaha and now of Lincoln, as the only attendant. In the motoring party Monday were Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Davis, Dr. and Mrs. George Pratt, the Messrs. and Mesdames Eldred Hart, W. J. Coad, Allan Tukey, Louis Clarke, Frederick Bucholz and the Naasson Youngs who remained after a week-end there. Miss Eleanor Burkley and Messrs. Herbert Connell, Harry Burkley and Ed Lundquist also will go down.

The marriage of Miss Frances Whitmore to Walter White will take place Wednesday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. William G. Whitmore of Lincoln. Rev. James MacDonald will perform the ceremony in the presence of 200 guests. The bride's only attendant will be her sister, Mrs. Willard Folsom, and Harold Hartley will serve as best man. Among the Omaha guests will be Mr. and Mrs. Roy Brown, Maynard Buchanan, Dr. and Mrs. A. W. Edmiston, J. H. Hansen, Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Hascall, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. Henry S. Lillian Did Not Finish Telling About the Book.

"Where did this thing come from?" Lillian, with an airily contemptuous gesture held out to me the book which had occasioned me such mental anguish when I had read it, and puzzled over the inscription evidently to Dicky which had adorned its title page.

"It's a book Dicky brought home the other night."

"Did he tell you anything about it?"

"No—but I saw him tearing out the title page when he thought I wasn't looking."

She looked at me keenly.

"Are you sure he didn't know?" she asked cryptically, even while she turned to the front of the book and gazed thoughtfully at the mutilated page.

"If that isn't exactly like the Dicky-bird," she mused. "Whether he brought it home intentionally or not, he ought to have his neck wrung. The way I feel now, I could do the job with scientific despatch. Have you read the thing?"

"Most of it," I acknowledged miserably.

"Especially all descriptions of the hero," she retorted with a sudden grin which heartened me without my knowing why. "Now let me impress something upon your alleged membrane of the havoc he would make in the kitchen to which he was retreating, I intervened.

"Let me take the things, Dicky," I coaxed. "It's time you went to meet Edwin and Harriet, anyway."

"By Jove, it is!" he exclaimed with a glance at the mantel clock. "Marion, you were entirely too fascinating. If I miss my distinguished relatives I shall put all the blame on you."

He dumped the parcels into my arms, and rushed hastily out.

"I do hope he won't miss them," I worried, "although he ought to have plenty of time on the subway."

"He'll get there," Lillian returned with the encouraging cheerfulness which is always with her, and which is rarely unjustified. "And if there should be a delay on the subway, they know your address and telephone number, don't they?"

"Oh! yes."

Madge is Told Not to Worry.

"Well, then, what's the reason for any solicitude. They are neither children nor aged people, but citizens of the world perfectly capable of finding you, ut fusing, and haul me out the linens and silver and china you want on here."

"The linens will meet your approval, I fancy," I answered, "but the china, the glasses and the silver all came from the five-and-ten, as Mrs. Marks calls it."

"Good," Lillian disregarded my apologetic tone. "It's no trick to arrange an artistic table when you have every resource. It's one of my pet theories that wonders can be accomplished with everyday things."

Dicky and Marion Interrupt.

For an uncomprehending instant I stared at her in amazement at her sudden irrelevant question, and the deftness approaching a sleight-of-hand trick with which she transferred the offending book from her hands to the chair beside her. Then Dicky and Marion burst into the room, and I realized that her quick ears had warned her of their entrance.

"Don't you dare put one of those things down in here, Dicky-bird," Lillian cried, as Dicky with his usual impetuosity began to scatter the bulging parcels in his arms, parcels which from long experience of his little way, we knew contained all sorts of indigestible and absurd things for Marion. "We're all ready for company, we are, and if you don't watch your step, you'll find yourself in a corner behind the door with your face to the wall for the evening."

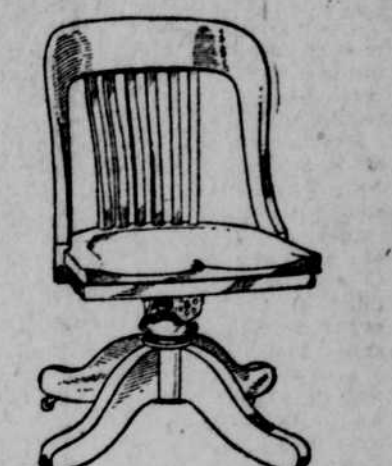

He made a rebellious grimace at her, but he picked up the things, nevertheless. I never have known him to disregard an ultimatum of Lillian's. But, with a sudden re-

Bring me the things, and then please go away and let me dream—did the florist give you plenty of that feathery green stuff?—yes—that's bully. Roll your hoop then, and I'll roll mine."

I brought to her all the things she needed for the decking of the table, shut the door upon her, and gave attention to the final details of my dinner. And when, with everything as nearly ready as I could manage before the actual arrival of my guests, I went back to the living room, I found that she had somehow transformed the cheap sordid room into softened beauty. I had expected to feel apologetic when Dicky's relatives entered, but when I heard his ring heralding them, it was with distinct pride that I threw open the door.

When your mother reads the story of Peter Pan to you, you will quickly learn why Peter Pan always carried his horn with him. You see the Neverland, where Peter lived was an island and when he wished to call the fairies together he would blow loudly through his trumpet.

When You Think of Bread

Peter Pan Bread is made from the prize-winning recipes of Omaha's best home bread bakers. It is the one bread that is given every known advantage to assure perfect quality. It is "certified" by the Good Housekeeping Magazine as being one of the three best breads in all America.

Just say PETER PAN to your grocer and you will receive your favorite loaf, whether it be White Bread, Rye, Raisin, Graham, Whole Wheat, Vienna or Pullman, the sandwich loaf.

Where is the truck you bought twelve years ago?

"I bought 'old Betsy' in October, 1911, and she is still the good, old faithful servant, showing a profit every month," writes J. P. Holland, excavation contractor of San Francisco—"She has traveled about 200,000 miles."

"'Old Betsy' is Pierce-Arrow Truck No. 61—one of the first hundred trucks made by the Pierce-Arrow Motor Car Company. Most of the hundred, like "Betsy," are still earning profits today.

Mr. Holland today operates nine Pierce-Arrows. The modern ones, with their Dual-Valve engines, "have a world of power."

"On some very steep hill work, they ascend a 22 per cent grade on soft road, heavily loaded," he says. "Can you imagine it?"

The Pierce-Arrow Worm Drive, Dual-Valve Truck is a powerful truck. It's an economical truck, too. May we show you just what satisfaction they will render in your business?
