

Dean Noyes in Fistic Combat Over Epithet

Commissioner Objects to Being Called "Skunk" Because of Council Vote, 'Tis Rumored.

City Commissioner Dean Noyes Tuesday admitted knocking a man down with his fist on the street in front of the Food center, 1914 Farnam street.

Tuesday morning he was nursing a cut and swollen hand in the council chamber.

The argument is alleged to have been over Noyes' action in voting to remove Commissioner Dan Butler from the police department. Noyes declined to comment on the rumor.

When Noyes dropped in at the Baseball Headquarters, patrons in the store told him that the man, whose name Mr. Noyes declined to reveal, was looking for him.

"He said you were a skunk," someone vouchsafed.

About Face!

Noyes faced about.

"He ain't lookin' for me any more than I'm lookin' for him," quoth the commissioner, or words to that effect and strode out wrathfully.

In front of the Food center he met the man.

"Did you call me a skunk?" he queried.

"I did."

"Wham!"

When the dust cleared away Noyes was nursing his injured hand; his opponent was sprawling on the pavement, and the contents of a fruit stand in front of the Food center were scattered to the four winds.

"Yes, I had a fight, but it's all settled now," Noyes admitted this morning. "And, anyhow, it's nobody's business. It resulted in a thorough understanding."

And he tentatively kicked a gash in his right knuckles.

Murder Feared on Honeymoon

No Word Received From Wisconsin Couple in Five Weeks.

By Associated Press.

Cambria, Wis., Oct. 23.—Cambria, staid, quiet Wisconsin dairy town, has provided the police of two states with a mystery that equals any disappearance of humans in fiction.

Seven weeks ago Abel Jones married the daughter of A. A. Kuehn, local general storekeeper. Two days later they left on a honeymoon trip in an automobile.

In the last five weeks no word has been received from the young people.

Investigation made the mystery only more baffling. Seldom have the police been confronted with a case that lacks clues as this one.

The last cards and letters received here by Mr. Kuehn told of their journeying through the state, of their crossing into upper Michigan, and of their arrival at Crystal Eagle.

Fearing foul play, Mr. Kuehn left for the north in his automobile, and personally scoured the wooded district and the small towns along the woods, but found no trace of the couple.

Chief of Police Martin of Cambria and Mr. Kuehn last night said they feared the couple may have been murdered.

The bride and groom were well known in this community and had no enemies so far as known. Both of the young people grew up in Cambria and were "sweethearts" since school days, their wedding being the culmination of a long romance.

Council Orders Washout Repairs

City council Tuesday approved an arrangement between the street department and public improvements department, for the repair of various washouts caused by the heavy rains in September.

Commissioner Joseph Koutsky told council that he recommended the city buying dirt from contractors and hauling it to the places to be filled.

Commissioner Dean Noyes said seven places were so badly damaged that they have been fenced. At Sixth and Cedar streets a section of the sewer broke and an area of pavement was undermined. Mr. Koutsky stated that he believed $3,500 would suffice for present needs. The money will be taken from street, public improvement and miscellaneous funds.

Delinquent Tax List Is Large

No rush of citizens yearning to pay taxes has been noted by the county treasurer's office since the publication of the delinquent tax list, according to clerks in that office Tuesday.

The office force has been working nights for about two weeks, but it has not been at the task of taking in taxpayers' money. Twenty of the 42 clerks in the office are on duty every night writing out the $6,000 tax notices which must be compiled and mailed to taxpayers before November 1.

Since the publication for two successive weeks of the list of property liable to be sold for taxes beginning the first Monday in November, a few property owners have paid up. Most wait until this year's taxes fall due on November 1 and then pay both for long, slow-moving lines and great complications during the first week in November.
