A small gray squirrel honestly engaged in accumulating nuts short circuited an important lighting system at Washington, leaving the capitol and the congressional library in darkness. The shock killed the squirrel.

Similar squirrels are operating Europe—human squirrels with intentions less honest and results more disastrous.

Henry Ford's fight seems to be taking definite shape. There isn't much doubt that he intends to run for the presidency, with or without All the Ford-for-President clubs will meet in Detroit in December, and plans for an independent convention will be made.

The real "Ford-for-President" clubs are the thousands of Ford agencies, one in every corner of the United States, from Florida to Alaska.

Each has an able manager to whom the name Henry Ford means wealth and an excellent lifelong

The question is: Can Ford, by any chance, stampede the demo-cratic convention? Political leaders believe that if Ford had a regular nomination it would be impos-sible to beat him. If the democrats believe it earnestly in 1924, and if Ford had somebody that could produce a "Cross of Gold" speech for him, stampeding the convention might not be difficult. What politicians want, first of all,

If it amuses you to think about politics and discuss them, you can build up many combinations and

For instance, with Coolidge and McAdoo nominated, and Ford running independent, what would happen? Would Ford take enough farmers from Coolidge to elect Mc-Adoo? Would he take enough farmers from Coolidge and enough southern democrats from McAdoo to elect himself?

Suppose Hiram Johnson ran on the republican ticket, McAdoo on the democratic and Ford independent, what would happen then?

Would the Wall street crowd that now hates McAdoo take him to their bosom saying, "Save us from Ford and Johnson?"

Dr. Crile, great surgeon and reientist of Cleveland, tells American surgeons in Chicago, "man is simply a mechanism, run by electricity and chemical reaction."

You, gentle reader, are a machine, made up of 28,000,000,000 electric cells, each cell a little wet battery, with negative and positive poles. Your brain cells are the most positive, your liver cells the most negative.

As your thinking is done in a thin, brown, outside layer of brain material called the cortex, so the energy in your 28,000,000,-000 cells is developed in a thin out-side layer. It would take 625,000 such layers to make one inch.

Your energy depends on "the difference in electrical potential between positive and negative." This difference, which gives us power, dies away when we are fatigued. Sleep restores it. At death it disappears entirely.

That's intensely interesting. Speaking physically and physiolo-gically, it is probably true. But how do the 28,000,000,000 cells think? How do they all concentrate on the same problem at the same instant? "Electricity and chemical reactions don't pro-duce thought, build dynamos, unite oceans, decorate the Sistine chapel, or write Beethoven's music.

What is the thing that lives among the 28,000,000,000 cells, ruling them and this earth? What scientist will tell us that?

All European exchange is weak, franc driven below 6 cents, the proud pound sterling touching the year's lowest mark. Europe thinks serious trouble is hidden beneath the latest development, the appar-ent crumbling of the German empire, etc.

The situation has often been infinitely worse and civilization, such as it is, has survived.

The black death, sweeping over Europe, makes our big war with its Spanish influenza seem like a stational incident.

trifling incident.

The collapse of the Roman power east and west, followed by the dark ages of superstition, ignorance and torture, was infinitely more discouraging than any re-cent happening. We no longer murder young children in war, ex-terminate or drive into slavery the men and women.

When Europe gets ready to save itself, stop fighting, robbing, in-vading, it can be saved. It's lucky for this country that fools did not succeed in sending us over there to undertake the whole job, via the league of nations. Copyright. 1928.

37 Years Ago Today

This announcement was published thirty-seven years ago today in the Omaha papers. It is a long step from the frontier town with mud streets of those days to the hustling metropolis of a generation later. There is a great deal of difference in the appearance of the first store and our present merchandising establishment. But principles that are fundamental in business as with peoples, change not with the centuries but with the ages. This announcement would attract the same large measure of attention today that it did then and furthers our conclusion that the truth about merchandise without extravagant statement is in the long run the best method.
