

Beet Producers Want to Inspect Refinery Books

Will Meet in Denver With Officials of Sugar Companies to Make Request.

Lincoln, Oct. 30.—C. B. Steward, secretary of the Nebraska Farm Bureau federation, left here to attend a conference of intermountain sugar beet growers in Denver. He was accompanied by Walter Petzet, director of co-operative marketing of the American Farm Bureau federation, and Aaron Sapiro, legal counsel of the organization. They will return to Lincoln Wednesday for a meeting with Nebraska poultry raisers, at which co-operative marketing of poultry products will be discussed.

One of the primary objects of the Denver meeting, according to Mr. Steward, will be to secure the privilege, by beet sugar growers, of the inspection of the books of sugar refineries. Sugar beets are sold on a participating contract, under which growers secure additional payment from refineries if their sugar content and the selling price of sugar warrant it. Heretofore, growers have had to take refinery figures, and they desire to satisfy themselves, with their own employees, that they are correct.

Under the participating contract scheme, Nebraska sugar growers recently received an additional $1 a ton, according to A. N. Mathers of Gering, who raises many beets. This means $650,000 to growers of the state, and brings the total price per ton that growers have received this year to $8.01.

The meeting to discuss poultry marketing, scheduled for 2 o'clock at the Lincoln Chamber of Commerce Wednesday, is open to business men who are interested in the subject as well as to poultry fanciers, Mr. Steward stated.

It had been previously planned to have Mr. Petzet address Lincoln business men prior to the marketing meeting, but he will be unable to return from Denver in time to make the address. To take its place he has made arrangements to include in his introductory remarks at the marketing meeting, the subjects that he was to present to members of the chamber of commerce.
