Old, Old Story of "In-Laws" Instigators

Father-in-Law Can Be Managed—Whole Battery of Sisters and Brothers-in-Law Crush Wife's Courage.

By MARTHA ALLEN.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENT of benefit received from advice given in this column is gratefully received. ABC writes that she ventures to ask for help in regard to her "in-laws," because she has profited by advice given to others. The dangerous question of settling with troublesome "in-laws" will now be considered. It is the old story. Her husband's father lives at their home and he is difficult to manage. The patient woman is willing to put up with that, but the fly in the ointment is meddling sisters and brothers-in-law. She says that they poison the mind of the father and the usual family quarrels follow. The distracted wife even thinks of leaving the husband, although she loves him. The little daughter prevents hasty departure from the home.

There ought to be laws enacting severe corporal punishment for troublesome "in-laws." Several wise judges who have presided over divorce courts have stated that these very persons cause the majority of divorces in this country. Since there is no lawful help for such a deplorable situation, the wife must make the husband realize the disposition in the home on account of his relatives. He must either refuse to let them enter the home or else depart to a district beyond their control. Of course, a little forbearance is necessary in all disputes. Sometimes the family ax can be buried without any casualties.

Florence: The peroxide and ammonia bleach will not induce further growth of the hair. It tends to kill the roots of the hair, as a matter of fact.

Underweight: Strenuous exercising necessary for reducing is not necessary in putting weight on. Still a certain amount of exercise must be taken to stimulate to activity the vital organs—heart, lungs, stomach, liver and skin. The deep breathing comes first in order of importance.

Marjorie: There are many good cleaners on the market now. The spot on the tulle dress can probably be removed easily if it has not changed the color. Consult a reliable druggist for such a cleaner.

High School Girl: Question of class colors and mottoes will have to be put to a vote of the class. It is impossible for me to make such a weighty decision. As for yells for your basket ball team, that is something only your school or class can choose. Knowing nothing of the class colors or name of the school, I am unable to help you.

Miss Sinclair to Wed November 28

Mrs. Beulah Cooper Sinclair announces the coming marriage of her daughter, Annabel, to Omar Wellington Jarred of Kansas City, Mo., which will take place Wednesday evening, November 28 at 8:30 o'clock at the First Baptist church. The ceremony will be followed by a reception at the home of the bride's mother.

Miss Sinclair will be attended by her sister, Miss Helen Sinclair, maid of honor; Mrs. C. H. Sells, matron of honor; the Misses Margaret Hoffman and Alice Mahoney, bridesmaids, and Lucile Kilgore, flower girl. Donald Morton of Kansas City will serve as best man, and the ushers will be Aisel Nielson and Edward Hurst.

Miss Sinclair was graduated from Central High school. Mr. Jarred attended the University of Missouri. The couple will make their home in Kansas City.

Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

How Lillian Interpreted Dicky to Madge.

"Another man's marital adventures!" I repeated incredulously after Lillian, at her comment upon the book which had so distressed me. "Why! he has described Dicky—"

"To the last parting of his hair, and the suspicion of a dimple in his chin," she retorted flippantly.

"I grant you that, I don't mean his physical appearance," I said. "That he might very easily take Dicky is—"

"I stopped, flushing, furious with myself for my embarrassment.

"Handsome enough for any hero. I'll hand that to you too. Any old Greek god would try to get under his pedestal for very shame if he saw our Dickybird strolling down the street—"

She grinned at me provokingly but I am used to her merciless teasing.

"He has limned Dicky's brain and disposition as faithfully as he has his appearance," I persisted. "Why! there are things in that book, which I would have sworn only I—or you—could have known."

"There are few shrewder observers or analysts than Widdicombe when he gets up ambition enough to write," Lillian answered. "But even he realizes the truth of Stevenson's writing axiom. You remember—"

"The 'psychical surgery' which he employed in turning a dear friend into that engaging monster, John Silver?" I countered.

Dicky Only Part of Hero.

"Exactly. Widdicombe took all the principle and high-mindedness out of his portrayal of Dicky, and endowed his hero—save the mark—these modern 'heroes' give me two or three severe pains—with the morals and messy romances of another acquaintance of his. Now, Madge," she looked at me sharply, and I saw that I had not been quick and shrewd enough to conceal the incredulity which I still felt, despite her statement, "I never deliberately deceived you, and I expected you to believe me when I tell you that there is nothing in this book which should give you a minute's uneasiness. I know Widdicombe, and I know the man who is the supplementary angle to Dicky—have I my geometry right?—in the book. I meant to bring you the book when it came out, and explain the situation to you in words of one syllable, before you had it handed to you without explanation. Why the Dicky-bird should have been asinine enough to bring the thing home without first telling you about it, I can't imagine, unless—"

But she stopped abruptly, and eyed me with a speculative air.

"Didn't you say you saw him tearing the title page out?"

"Yes."

"What was on it, or hadn't you seen it?"

"Yes, I had seen it," I replied miserably. "It read, 'To Benjamin, with the author's gratitude.'"

Expounding Dicky's System.

"Now isn't that exactly like the Dicky-bird?" Lillian addressed the atmosphere wistfully. "Bringing anything like that home and leaving it where his wife could get hold of it? Either he's getting more rattle-brained than usual, or else—Madge—it looks to me as if he brought the thing home on purpose, to see if he could get a rise out of you. I've always taken off my best chapeau to you for the way you've kept Dicky-bird guessing since you married him. I don't mean about your actions—the land knows Caesar's wife was a modern flapper compared to you—but about your real sentiments concerning the divers and sundry little performances he has staged. You very seldom have hated even an eye, and I think Dicky-bird, in masculine fashion, is puzzled and a bit resentful. It's a tribute to a man's vanity, you know when his wife or sweetheart gets all teary and excited over his derelictions, real or fancied."

"You don't advise me to try the teary excitement, do you?" I asked dryly.

"Not on your diamond anniversary," she responded promptly. "The Dicky-bird needs just that flavor of uncertainty in his emotional menu. But I don't put it past him—to quote your mother-in-law—to try to rouse you jealousy. But I must say that he's losing his fine artistic touch. Very clumsy work, that with the fly leaf. I'm surprised at him."

Dr. and Mrs. John F. Allen have moved to the Tadousac apartments.

Enrich the Flavor With ALAMITO CREAM

Cream Makes the Coffee

It is generally conceded that Alamito cream imparts to coffee a flavor and taste that highly pleases the most exacting. Alamito cream is richer in butter fat, with a sweeter taste and a more mellow flavor than any other cream served in the city. All demonstrators, chefs and other connoisseurs of coffee know this to be true and insist on Alamito cream. If you enjoy good coffee, buy
