

Redskins Show Their Ability

Work Out for a Few Minutes for Fans at High School Games.

By L. C. GRAHAM. One remark is being passed about the campus of the Creighton university, "The Indians are here." The remark began going the rounds early yesterday and gradually gained momentum until after the Redskins had shown what they could do, it went over the school like a giant wave.

And there was reason for it to spread. The news of a great disaster will spread rapidly and the exhibition of forward passing that was given by John Levi looked very much like a disaster for the Blue and White.

Not that the Hilltoppers have no chance to take the game. They are sure they have a good chance if they will start the game fighting and fight every minute while the play lasts.

There is just one thing that the Indians will be unable to combat from all appearances. That thing is a good fighting spirit and a team that can play the same fast game that the Redskins depend upon. Creighton has that spirit somewhere. They have kept it pretty well hidden up to date, but with all the razzing that they have gotten from their mentor, Chet Winne, during the past week they may find the latent quality and make use of it.

As for the Indians they have nothing to say. They trotted on Creighton field yesterday afternoon between the high school games and did their stuff. They punted and chased passes to limber up their stiffened muscles.

If John Levi can throw such a forward pass while his muscles are stiff from travel—well, it will be worth seeing what he does when he feels right. His passes yesterday spun true through the air for 50 and 60 yards. He threw with all the grace of his race and just generally handled the pigskin as though it were a horsehide-covered baseball. After that exhibition it is easily understood why some of the fans want to know if his work will be called "forward passing" in the game today.

Levi also showed that his toe was well educated when he booted a few down the field. His punts were wonderful, but compared to his forward passing, they are almost considered almost mediocre. It is the aerial game in which the Indians shine and Levi is the whole team there.

Sportographs

By ELCEE. Today is the day of the big horse race. At last it will be known who is the faster, Zev or My Own.

A horse race is a funny thing, though. There will be possibly two horses at the barrier that are looked on as winners. The rest of the field is just a minus quantity that happens to be present.

The presence of the rest of the field is sometimes disheartening though. A horse without a chance has been known to come galloping in about three lengths ahead of the nearest competitor.

In Memoriam may be that horse in the race today. No one seems to think that In Memoriam has much of a chance. But that horse has run some excellent races this season and, apparently, has not extended himself doing it.

Should the outsider win, there will undoubtedly be a number of wise ones who will say I told you so. These wise ones, however, very likely will ask for the price of supper immediately after uttering such a wise remark.

There are many of the racing fans of the country who are praying that My Own will win. Many of them have no money to bet on the race, but Admiral Carey T. Grayson's sportsmanlike attitude at the time of the International Honors race (for a measly purse of $100,000) won their hearts.

The admiral is evidently a racing man of the old school. He believed that the Jockey club was about to select a thoroughbred to carry the national colors on its merits and not from friendship. The admiral was wrong.

He was a good sport, though, and never murmured about a "raw deal." He deserves a lot of credit.

Football will vie with horse racing for first honors in the public's attention today. This is the day that all the colleges get together and try to kick around certain representatives, elected to the exalted position by merits.

World Series' Stars Are Welcomed Home

Los Angeles—Bob and Emil Meusel, who figured prominently in the recent world series, were joyously received by their fellow native sons when they returned to the sunny California. Yankees, while brother Emil tried his best to keep the Giants in the running for the world's title. Both boys were lifted to the shoulders of their friends on their arrival and paraded through the streets.

Miske Receives Many Offers

That the boxing fans of Omaha are going to see the same Billy Miske in action next Wednesday night that they saw when he knocked out Harry Foley here last January, is the declaration made by Miske's manager, Jack Reddy.

Miske has been training faithfully for his coming match with Bill Brennan and intends to knock him out inside of three or four rounds, according to Reddy.

Several offers have been received by Miske from promoters throughout the country for his services should he score a clean-cut victory over Brennan.

Tex Rickard has offered him $15,000 for a match with Jack Renault in case the Canadian emerges victor in his fight with Floyd Johnson tonight. Jim Mullen also has made a very good offer for a match between Miske and Renault to be held in East Chicago.

Miske will arrive in Omaha Sunday and will work out in a local gymnasium in the afternoon. His weight at present is 133 pounds.

The game between Dartmouth and Cornell may furnish arguments later as to the best team in the east.
