

Nebraska Grid Team Does the Impossible and Defeats Fast Notre Dame Outfit Creighton Hiltoppers Swamp Michigan Aggies Under 27-6 Score in Fast Game

Crush Knute Rockne's Team by 14 to 7 Score

22,000 Watch Spellbound While Highly Touted Team Goes Down.

By FRED S. HUNTER.
Lincoln, Nov. 10.—An amazing exhibition of football that held 22,000 spectators in breathless suspense, brought victory to the warriors of Nebraska in its annual conflict with Notre Dame at the new Nebraska stadium here today. The score was 14 to 7.

These pictures show a few of the more tense moments of the grid contest at Lincoln yesterday. The picture on the upper right shows Noble down behind the goal line for the first score. On the left is Noble getting away to a run around right end. In the lower right hand picture Nebraska attempts a field goal from the 30 yard-line. On the left in that row is proof that Notre Dame could get away once in awhile. Miller is shown starting on a good run around end.

The insert shows how the game effected Knute Rockne. He sat like a general on the sidelines unable to stem the attack of the Cornhuskers.

It would be an impossible task to single out the particular members of the Nebraska team that started. Every member of the squad rose to great achievements, and therein it is disclosed the real reason for the Nebraska victory. The team played together. There were no bright stars. It was a well-oiled, well-balanced, perfectly-running machine that the 22,000 or so spectators saw in action today. And in the long runs it is the football team that wins games, not the star.

Dawson had no Don Millers, no Strehlmeiers, no Crowleys, but he had Herb De Witz and Dave Noble and Vern Lewellen and a dozen more who played like the Kansas and Missouri games, but it was "ace-high" today, and smothered play after play for the Notre Dame warriors.

De Witz Kicks Goals.
He scored the second touchdown in the third quarter with the assistance of Herb De Witz. De Witz tossed a beautifully directed forward pass right in to Noble's arms. The Omaha laid gathered it in his arms and scampered to the goal line.

Herb De Witz kicked both goals after touchdown.
The solitary Notre Dame touchdown was scored in the final period, after Rockne had sent straggling into the game a score of substitutes in an effort to stem the Nebraska tide.

Forward passes netted the tally. After Nebraska had lost the ball on the Notre Dame territory, the Hoosiers resorted to reckless football, with long forward passes. Two long passes of more than 25 yards each were completed and took the ball to Nebraska's 20-yard line. From that point of vantage a pass from Stuhldreher to Carney brought the touchdown. Stuhldreher kicked the goal.

But that touchdown was merely balm for the troubled spirits of the invading Hoosiers. It did not come until only a few more moments of play were left, and nothing less than a miracle could have enabled them to even tie the count, let alone win. And no miracles were happening at Nebraska field today, unless perhaps disgruntled followers of the fortunes of the South Bend institution will claim that it has to be a miracle any time Nebraska wins over Notre Dame.

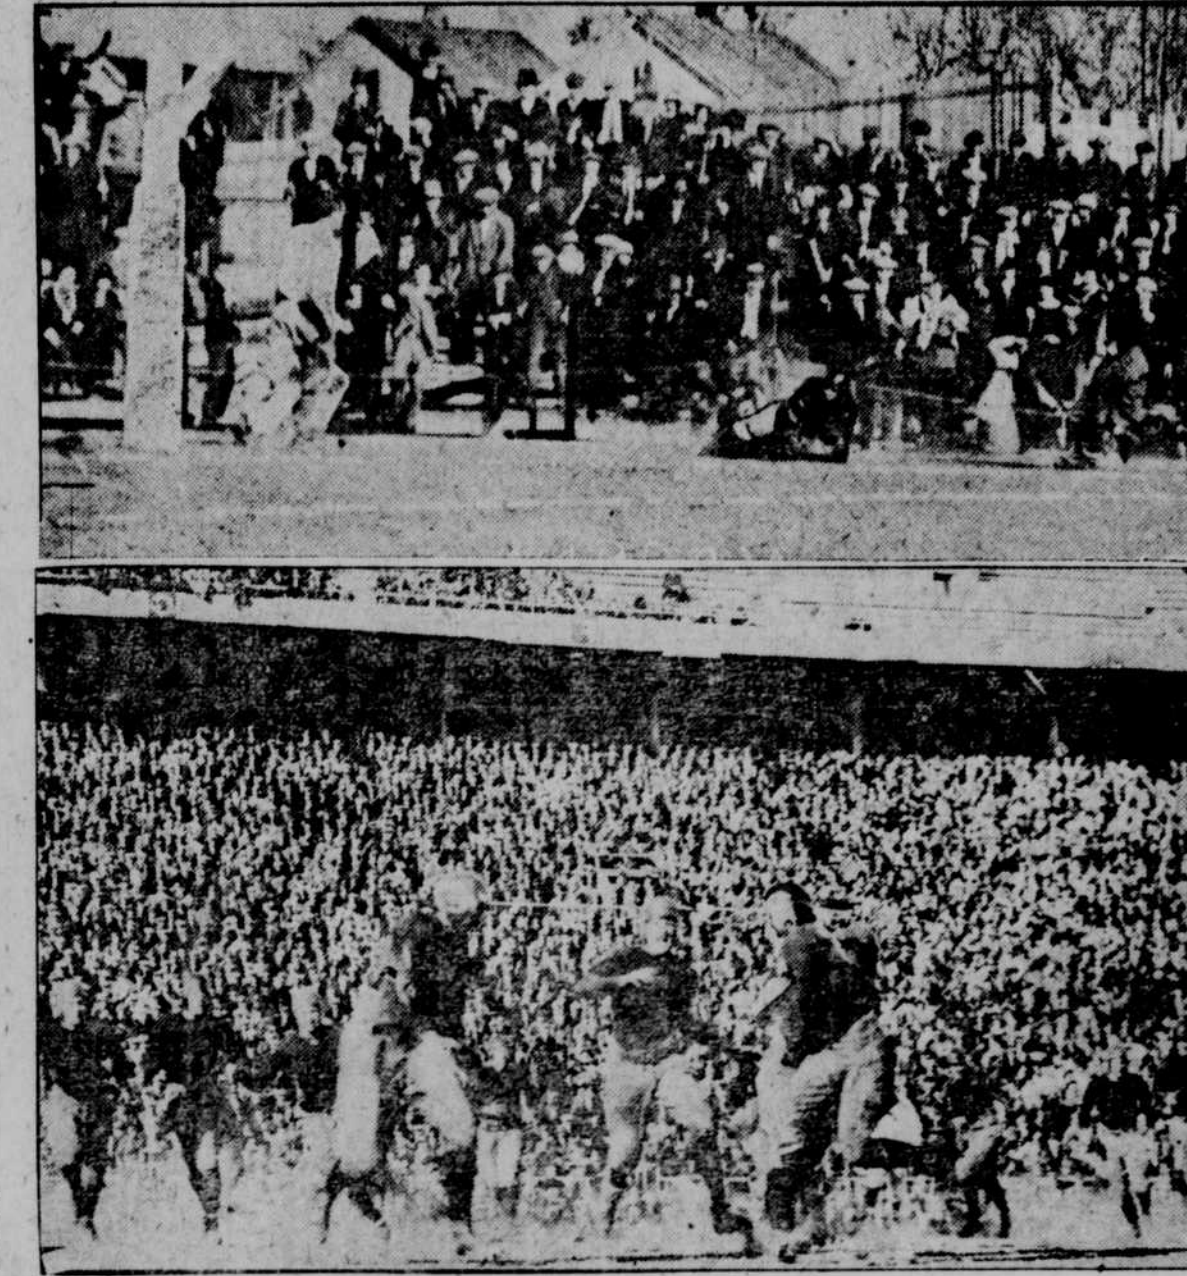

Nebraska Line Like Rods.
A study of the statistics will give an indication of the margin by which Nebraska outplayed Notre Dame. The ball was in Notre Dame territory the greater part of the time and as early in the combat as the second quarter the Hoosier leaders came to full realization that, barring accidents, theirs was a beaten team.

Unable to penetrate the Nebraska line, and almost as helpless in their attempts to skirt the ends, the Hoosiers turned to forward passing. And it was that reckless, heedless forward passing seen on the Nebraska gridiron in recent years. The Hoosiers were playing long shots, taking chances, trying anything and everything.

But Nebraska was prepared for that, and was equal to any and all emergencies. The number of intercepted and incompletely forwarded passes testified to that.

Right now let a word be said for Herb De Witz. Not long ago some harsh words were uttered as regards this young man. Let them be retracted with profuse apologies. Herb isn't such a husky youth, but Knute Rockne would have swapped half a dozen candidates for the All-American for him today. He had "kicked" this game in earnest. He had

Abraham Lincoln High Wallops Jefferson High in Bluffs, 7-0

Gold Bows in Defeat Before Crimson and Blue; Five Thousand in Stands; Pierce, Miller and Tice Stars of Gridiron Contest.

The big question in the Bluffs was settled yesterday afternoon at Thomas Jefferson athletic field, when Abraham Lincoln defeated Thomas Jefferson, 7 to 0.

The largest crowd in the history of Bluffs football witnessed the big battle. It was estimated that 5,000 fans were in attendance. Two bands representing the two schools played throughout the game, entertaining the large assemblage between halves.

Lincoln kicked off to start the second half to Gordon who returned the ball to the 30-yard line. Jefferson failed to gain and punted to Miller on his own 40-yard line. Miller made a brilliant return of 30 yards. Lincoln failed to gain and Walsh punted over the goal line. Jefferson's ball 20-yard line. Tice fumbled on the first play and Mann recovered for Lincoln on the 20-yard line. Two plunges by Pierce, who had returned to the game at the start of the second half, and Miller placed the ball on the nine-yard line. Jefferson with their backs to the wall braced and held the hard hitting Pierce for a gain of four yards in three tries. A double pass behind the line, Pierce to Miller, ending in a pass, Miller to Sheppard, completely fooled the Jefferson defense and netted a touchdown. Walsh kicked goal. The rest of the period was fought out in midfield.

The last quarter was featured by Jefferson's pass attack in an endeavor to score, but the brilliant defense of the Crimson and Blue prevented them from ever becoming dangerous. Towards the end of the game the Lincoln squad wore down the defense of the Jefferson team and forced the play deep into Jefferson's territory. Miller, ending in a pass, Miller to Sheppard, completely fooled the Jefferson defense and netted a touchdown. Walsh and Miller also starred for the Crimson, and Blue, while R. Mann's work on the defense stood out prominently. For Jefferson, Tice, Lloyd, Stevie and Rewerts stood out.

Sons of Former Athletes Play on Luther Grid Team

Decorah, Ia., Nov. 10.—The college athlete who whose father, an athlete at the same college before him, sits in the stands at the big games to see his son duplicate the athletic feats of his own generation lives not only in the fiction magazines and the books for aspiring youths.

Luther college claims to have on its football team more men whose fathers made athletic history here before them than any other school in the midwest. And incidentally the team expects to finish the season unbeaten.

Luther's fullback, Ossie Orwell, is a brother of last year's captain and the son of Sylvester M. Orwell, who is said to have been the fastest man in 1919 and the son of C. M. Larson, who participated in college athletics here before his graduation in 1893.

Knutson comes from a family which has furnished other athletes of note, among them Storkvist Knutson, football captain in 1920. Hjelte, Duckstad and Westby are other familiar names in Luther history which are brought into this year's scoring columns.

Yivasker comes from a family which has sent an almost unbroken line of athletes to Luther since before 1870, and Preus, football manager, has a father, uncle, and cousin and brothers in large numbers who have made athletic history here.

The SPORTLIGHT

The Duffer's Autumn Plea
Come, blissing gales and winter snows,
And bid each scolding day
Bring all my matches to a close
Before it is too late!
Rings April called me to the tee
I've chased the bounding ball
I haven't heard a single word
From office, wife or child.

Long have I tried to snap the chain
That held me in its thrall
But through the sun and stars and rain
I've chased the bounding ball
I haven't heard a single word
From office, wife or child.
And what is worse, O bitter curse,
I may have lost my home.

So blasting gales and winter snows
Despatch upon my fate;
Bring all my golf dates to a close
Before it is too late!
Yet though I find my job is gone
Where fate has grown, my wife is flown,
I've cut off seven strokes!

We are informed by those in authority that there is no difference between the weight and measurement of the tennis ball used in Great Britain and the United States, but there is perhaps a marked difference at times in the way they react to vastly different climatic conditions. There is less moisture, less heavy atmosphere over here, and usually a firmer surface or a harder one underneath. It is for these reasons the difference in resiliency seems so marked.

A Lesson to Watch.
If a football organization can have but one strong sector, which is the more valuable—a fine line or a fine backfield?

This test may be officially made in the Yale-Harvard game. Up through October Harvard, with veterans back, has shown the better line prospects—Yale the stronger, faster backfield possibilities. It is true that Yale may not find a punter with O'Hearn and Wight out, who can match Hammond.

But as form runs it is Yale that has the backfield strength and Harvard that has at least much more experienced forward play.

Don't Forget Hoge Workman

Of Ohio state, as one of the greatest, thunders a voice from the middle-west. "Here is a great defensive star who also can kick, pass, run, buck and interfere. There is none better on any field." We re-echo Mr. Workman's versatility with pleasure. Consider him ranked in polite football society.

"Bowman of Syracuse, the fastest back in the east?" queries Sidney Meyers. "What about Rudolph Payor of Brown? Here is a star who can outstep any rival, one of the leading stars of a big year." Payor also can step out of line and move over with the elite.

Some one has figured it out that over 5,000,000 people will see various football games this fall. And not over two of these will support the judgment of the quarterback handling the losing team. The slogan here should be: "Whatever gets by is right."

California football is running to the same high standard. And Smith has another delegation of merit to take its place among the fine eleven of the year. There is a lot of land between the two oceans, but no wide gap in football ability.

Among those looking for star quarterbacks the journey need not go far beyond Stuhldreher of Notre Dame and Pfann of Cornell. Who can name two better?
