Them's Harsh Words.
The Coppers Got Anna.
Religion's Power Lasts.
Do You Love Goldfish?
By ARTHUR BRISBANE

Woodrow Wilson notices deterioration in the people of the United States since he led them. In one carefully built sentence of more than 160 words sent broadcast over the radio he ends with the statement that after the war this nation "withdrew into a sullen and selfish isolation, which is deeply ignoble, because manifestly cowardly and dishonorable."

Perhaps some radio listeners, when they came to the three words, "ignoble, cowardly, dishonorable," turned the knob and "tuned in" on somebody else's good night story.
If so, it was a mistake. All the Woodrow Wilson radio talk was instructive. It indicates, first, that he is not a candidate for the 1924 democratic nomination; second, that it is possible "to indict an entire nation."

Anna Baron, aged 16, is Chicago's latest "bandit queen." Five men were with her in a big stolen racing car when the police shot up the car and captured Anna. Her mother says:
"I'm glad the coppers got Anna. They may learn her something in jail."

"When she was young Anna was good, helped wash the babies, took care of them. Then she got 'wild'.
Her parents 'tried everything.' In fact, the mother says, the father had locked Anna in a shed with a chain, padlocked to her leg, on the night when she got away and was arrested."

That picture of modern education and home life would interest Rousseau, Pestalozzi, Herbert Spencer, Froebel and other educators.
They might suggest that "the coppers" reach something "in jail" to other members of the bandit queen's family."

Religion is still powerful in national affairs. In Germany it plays a greater part than socialism, bolshevism or capitalism. The Wittelsbachs, royal Catholic family of Bavaria, who furnished kings to Germany long before the Protestant Hohenzollerns were known, are again rivals of those Hohenzollerns for the rule of Germany, when it shall become too weak to rule itself.

Stresemann, managing the German republic, allowed the Hohenzollern crown prince to return from Holland, that his royal Protestant influence might offset the revolutionary royal Catholic influence of the Wittelsbachs in Bavaria. To let one royal religion fight another is his plan.

At Canossa, long ago, a German emperor crossing the mountains in winter stood in the snow, penitent, barefoot, in the courtyard of the pope's palace.
Bismarck thought that was ended when he uttered his famous "Wir gehen nicht nach Canossa."
"We are not going to Canossa."

But you never can tell. Religion, oldest force in human nature, next to self-preservation, reproduction and ambition, will play a part in this world for many a year.

One American concern is tenderly nursing 5,000,000 young goldfish for next year's market. You would hardly guess why. It has to do with the housing problem in big cities. Modern apartments are small, landlords and janitors very "independent." Sometimes, no children are allowed, cats and dogs are forbidden, but humans must love something.
No landlord objects to a goldfish bowl. So the sale of goldfish increases.
They take up little room. And while not very affectionate, you at least don't have to put them to bed, turn them out at night, or send for the doctor. There isn't any goldfish doctor. Their sleep doesn't worry you, for you can't tell whether they sleep or not. If they die, they just die. An excellent thing to love, quite an improvement from many points of view, on a living child. Buy a goldfish.

Bandits' "Angel"
Is Discovered

Detectives Locate Prospective
Rendezvous—Woman Finances Operations.

Mrs. Lucille MacLaron, Villisca, Ia., is the "angel" who financed the Boone farm, north of Florence, alleged to have been a prospective headquarters for a bandit gang, and which was raided Monday afternoon by a squad of detectives, according to police.

A.S. MacDonald

It was she, detectives say, who furnished the money for the defense of Floyd Holladay, arrested in the raid, and obtained his release when he was in court recently charged with threatening to kill his wife.

Later, they say, Holladay was established on the Boone farm by Mrs. MacLaron and a quantity of livestock found on the farm is believed to have been stolen from various farms over an area of several square miles, detectives allege.

Others Arrested.
Edward McCarthy was arrested with Holladay as part owner of the farm, together with Edward N. Neary, 1302 Douglas street, Hazel, Mo., 2320 North Sixty-first street, and Bertha Fishbough, 805 South Eighteenth street.

The raid on the farm was made by Detectives Gurnett, Palmat, Munch, Ryan, Summit, Trapp, Buford and Towley, all armed with sawed-off shotguns. The detectives had expected resistance. The farm is so located, they say, that one man with a rifle might stand off 50 men.

All persons arrested in the raid are held for investigation. A grip containing jewelry, property of Joe Hardesty and Henry Phillips, said to be crooks now operatin in Minneapolis, was found in the farm home.

House Resembles Fort.
"Holladay evidently intended to establish the place as a rendezvous for a gang of criminals this winter," said Detective Gurnett. "The farm house sits up on a hill and looks like it was intended for a fort."

Ralph Danewood, 3225 Fort street, arrested by Detectives Palmat and Gurnett later in the day, in connection with several holdups in Omaha is alleged to have been a frequenter of the farm.

Social Worker Says
"Keeping 'Em on Farm"
Is Not All of Problem

Chicago, Nov. 13.—Persons guiding rural junior activities should do more than seek to "keep 'em down on the farm," Miss Maude Sheridan, state leader of home economics and club work in Colorado, declared at the convention of the Association of Land Grant Colleges here today.
Miss Sheridan said that in the training of the junior demonstrator it should be kept in mind that he may not choose to live on the farm until he is grown.

"The boy or girl in the country school," said Miss Sheridan, "should receive such an amount and quality of training as to fit him or her for making more valuable contributions to society in any event, no matter what the extent of the responsibility may be. He should always be alert to community problems and not sink to the level of the individualism exhibited in foreign lands."

The Ladies Home Journal sent Mr. MacDonald to the province of Quebec, Canada, last summer to investigate the workings of the liquor law there, which permits the unrestricted sale of light wine and beer.

Mr. MacDonald was for many years with The Kansas City Star, and the late William R. Nelson, editor and publisher of that paper, said of him that he was the best newspaper reporter he had ever known.

Macdonald had written many notable newspaper stories, some of them known as classics of journalism. One of those was the story of the Leo Frank case in Georgia. Frank was a Jew who had been convicted and sentenced to be hung in Atlanta for the murder of a girl who worked in a pencil factory of which he was manager.

Macdonald asserted that the big Bible class of 52,000 men which met last Sunday in Convention hall in Kansas City, the largest Bible class in the world, is a direct outgrowth of the Billy Sunday meetings in Kansas City. "That Bible class was born in the Billy Sunday meetings," he said.

Says U. S. Should Have Shunned War
Israel Zangwill Declares Strife Would Have Ended in Draw Otherwise.

New York, Nov. 13.—The United States would have been better for the world, as things turned out, if you had not gone in at all, Israel Zangwill, English author, today wrote as part of his reply to S. Stanford Menken, president of the National Society League, who, in a speech at Perth Amboy, N. J., last night, challenged Zangwill's recent criticism of things American.

"There then would have been a draw and militarism would have been killed instead of reviving in other countries," Zangwill continued. "My idea of the folly of preparedness does not attach to America alone, but to all the world. I am for the policy of disarmament which I believe is also an American ideal and which was the reason why our statement in England, at least—Asquith for example—were determined to prolong the war indefinitely."

"It is useless mentioning old historical analogies when you are faced with such terrible new weapons of destruction that all ideas of preparedness must be revised. That was why I insisted the real thing that was necessary was mental preparedness, to be aware of the causes that produce war and to try to circumvent it."

Reduction of 12,000,000 Acres in Wheat Is Urged by Committee

Chicago, Nov. 12.—The present wheat acreage of 62,000,000 acres planted should be reduced gradually to 50,000,000 acres, an average sufficient to take care of domestic demands, as rapidly as profitable alternative crops can be introduced, the wheat production committee of the wheat council of the United States has decided, President Sydney Anderson of the council announced at the end of a day's meeting of the committee here today.

The committee, Mr. Anderson said, in confining its consideration to the development of a long-time program and the economic measures necessary to carry out such a program and afford relief to the wheat farmer. The report, he said, will not attempt to deal with the immediate situation or its remedies.

The average annual consumption of wheat in the United States for food, feed for animals and seed is about six bushels per capita, or about 660,000,000 bushels a year. The average yield per acre over a period of 12 years is about 12.4 bushels, he said. The additional wheat required from year to year to meet the requirements of increased population should be obtained from a larger yield per acre rather than from an increase in area.
