

A Queer World

Newsboy Saves Package Containing $20,000 For Woman—She Gives Him $1.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—A reward of $1 for saving a package containing $20,000 was paid to Joe Stein, downtown newsboy by a woman patron. The woman left the package at Stein's news stand when she purchased a paper. Sometime later, on the verge of hysteria, she returned and frantically inquired for it. Joe had kept it for her, without knowing its value. She was taking it to the bank, she told him, and handed him $1.

Double Trouble. Long Beach, Cal., Nov. 17.—Several weeks ago, the 7-year-old son of C. W. Hodges was injured in an automobile accident. Tonight his father took the lad, still confined in a plaster cast, out for his first automobile ride since he was injured. Their machine struck Mrs. Anna Billingsley and knocked a 3-month-old infant from her arms. The baby was instantly killed, its mother slightly injured.

Old Stuff. Chicago, Nov. 17.—The subjects of King Tutankhamen more than 3,000 years ago struggled with the question which today is in the front rank of American political issues—national participation in world affairs.—Prof. James H. Breasted, director of the Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago, declared last night in his first public lecture on the opening of the tomb of the Egyptian pharaoh in the Valley of the Kings last February.

Long before the young king had been sealed in his magnificent tomb," he said, "the Egyptian people were forced to realize that the drama in which they were involved was being played on a world stage, and in the coffin texts inscribed on timbers long centuries before the first pieces in King Solomon's temple we find the dawning of the world idea, the first recognition of universal feeling and universal forces."
