Ralph M. Pearson, Chicago Etcher, to Speak Here Sunday

Arrived in Omaha today, to visit his mother, Mrs. Kate Mosher Pearson, who is ill in Florence at the home of his uncle, Dr. W. L. Ross, the noted etcher, Ralph M. Pearson, of Chicago has consented to speak on Sunday afternoon before the Fine Arts Society.

His arrival is timely from an artistic point of view for this week the complete collection of the noted French etcher and cartoonist, Forain, is in the Fine Art galleries at the library, and Mr. Pearson's lecture will emphasize these, together with an informal explanation of the art of etching itself.

At present there is not an etcher's press in Omaha but during his stay here Mr. Pearson will construct one, for his Nebraska inspirations, "Etching, the oldest form of printing, has not changed in process since its inception, 600 years ago. My press will be as fine as the one with which Rembrandt worked," he said. Mr. Pearson will convert into a studio an old servant's quarters, back of the Ross home on the hillside looking across the Florence square.

In appearance Mr. Pearson would satisfy the aesthetic soul which craves that its artist be individual. He is 6 feet 4 inches tall, brown-eyed, with a shock of rebellious black hair. His ruddy complexion bears out his five years' travels in Texas, N. M., and in California. He wears a light corduroy suit, and would charm Vanity fair followers with a foudler tie in shades of red. His only concession, to the artistic, a big one in our opinion, is a Navajo ring, almost an inch in length, a torquoise matrix set in hand-wrought silver.

Mr. Pearson considers Omaha is to be congratulated on the Forain exhibit. "One as complete as is a rarity outside of New York. The middle-west," he went on, "gives the artist a sense of satisfaction. It is doing big things, and is intelligently interested in art." "Wichita, Kan., for instance, has an art group remarkable for a city of its size. The middle-west is far ahead of California, in an artistic way," he concluded.

It is interesting to hear that the Biltmore hotel in New York has bought 100 of Mr. Pearson's original etchings. The new San Diego hotel in San Diego, also purchased some. These two hostellers are the first to put a contemporary etcher's works in their rooms.

Judge Lindsey Speaks to Shenandoah Club

Shenandoah, Ia., Nov. 22.—Talking to the business men of Shenandoah at the noonday luncheon of the commercial club, Judge Ben Lindsey, juvenile judge of Denver, discussed the social evils with great freedom.

Judge Lindsey said in Denver last year there were 2,000 marriages and 1,500 divorces, and in the country over the proportion is one divorce to seven marriages. The judge said he was not opposed to divorce, that in many cases the divorce is fully justified, but this shows the general condition of society is bad.

Judge Lindsey told of meeting in Omaha a war hero, wounded nine times, now a trusted employe, but who was one of the boys he saved in his juvenile court in Denver.

Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

Madge and Lella Were Left to Close the House.

I looked at Katherine with an understanding little smile. "I thought 'Her Fluffiness' had mistaken Dr. Braithwaite," I said. "He meant her to mistake him," Katherine returned. "He knows that in a patient of Mrs. Durke's type, it is imperative to keep the mind occupied with something foreign to the impending operation."

"He certainly succeeded," I commented dryly. "The prospect of Mrs. Braithwaite remaining behind here with me and straightening up her house was a most bracing prescription."

"Wasn't it?" Katherine agreed, and then with a wary glance around, and a discreetly lowered voice, she added: "But that was not the chief reason for his Machiavellian little scheme."

"You mean—Lella?"

"Exactly. She is so near hysteria herself that it is vitally necessary to keep her away from her mother-in-law as much as possible. Of course she will have to see her some time before night at the hospital. The elder woman will insist on that, and we shall have to humor her, but Dr. Braithwaite wishes you to keep Lella out here just as long as you possibly can, so that her call at the hospital will be extremely brief. So do you—prettiest."

With a mischievous little moue at me, she turned back toward Mrs. Durke's room, whither I followed her with an admiring respect for the adroit manner in which the big surgeon had solved simultaneously two delicate problems involving the difficult feminine equation.

Of the few minutes remaining before the arrival of the limousine which Harriet Braithwaite had ordered, scarcely one was left unpunctuated by little Mrs. Durke's voluminous directions concerning the care of her things. I had observed that everything was in its usual immaculate order—"Her Fluffiness" is a housekeeper par excellence—but one would have thought that a more top-syturty place never existed to listen to the little woman's laments.

"The whole place is a sight! I am ashamed to leave it this way," she kept repeating until at last, fearing that her worry was partly genuine, I put my hand under her chin and turned her face up to mine.

"Look here, Jeremiah," I said saucily. "I've listened to all the lamentations I can stand. We'll agree that no city slum ever equaled the condition of your home, but why brag about it?"

She laughed heartily, which was what I wanted, and it was but a minute or two afterward, when smiling, dimpling, waving her hand to Lella and me, as if she were going to some long anticipated fate, she stepped into the limousine and was whirled away.

My heart felt as if a constricting hand were upon it, and my eyes were perilously near to tears at her brave farewell. I hear that if I had been there I should have indulged in the feminine relief of a "good cry," but Lella's quick, choking breathing beside me, warned me that I must let no hint of my own emotion escape me.

Curbing Lella's Emotion.

"Oh! Madge," Lella quavered, "did you ever see anything so game as she is? Poor mother! Suppose—"

"Suppose you and I get at those dishes," I said briskly. "There are a few things to be done before you leave. You won't be back here for a day or two, you know, not until she's well started on the road to recovery." I hoped that my fear of a more tragic possibility was not betrayed in my face, but Lella needed no reminder.

"If she recovers," she said mournfully; and I put a playful but firm hand upon her lips.

"Come would put you in a dark corner with your face to the wall," I said. "Come on, let's do the dishes to the tune of 'Every day in every way'."

She pulled away from me a bit pettishly.

"I must say I don't feel like joking," she said with a prim, old-fashioned—and intensely provoking—stiffness that was charming—and "Neither do I!" I returned gravely, "but it is better than to waste our energy in nerve-racking forbodings that may never be realized. Your mother-in-law needs every bit of reserve force we all have just now, and we must play the game."

Camp Fire Girls Hold Wohelo Court.

The Omaha campfire girls will hold Wohelo court Saturday, 9:30 a. m., in Burgess-Nash auditorium. Girls who are expecting to take their rank in December are requested to be present.

Yellow Cab

A Convenience for the Car Owner

YELLOW CABS are a convenience for the automobile owner as well as the one who has no car. The fact that you have a car should not blind you to the many advantages of YELLOW CAB service.

When father takes the car to the office, store or factory, there is no reason why the other members of the family should be compelled to walk or use the street car. There is always a YELLOW CAB ready to take you anywhere and at any time.

If you live near the corner of 24th Street and Ames Avenue, you can ride in a YELLOW CAB to Brandeis store for only 95 cents with 20 cents extra for each additional passenger. A party of four may make this three-mile trip for only $1.55, or approximately 40 cents each.

There are innumerable occasions when you can use YELLOW CABS to supplement your private car. When your car is in the repair shop; when you want to take a train; when you want to make an emergency trip or social call; or on everyday business—you will find our cabs a welcome help.

YELLOW CAB is not a costly service. Modern methods applied to our business have removed cab service from the luxury class and made it an everyday necessity. You can ride in a YELLOW CAB as cheaply as in a private car, if you figure your depreciation, insurance, tires and other expenses of upkeep.

Crisis Looms in France Poincaire May Be Deposed Middle Classes Gaining

Here is a new angle to the international situation which is creating so much concern to England, France and Germany and is holding the interest of all the rest of the world.

These are some of the observations made by H. G. Wells, author of "The Outline of History," in a tour of France. In his special cable dispatch, which will appear exclusively in The Sunday Bee, the famous English author makes some new and startling revelations upon the importance of the 1924 elections in France and their bearing upon the future policies of Europe.

Don't fail to read Wells' enlightening dispatch in The Sunday Bee.

He was the son of millionaire parents. He belonged to all the exclusive clubs. Then why did he take taxi driver's job?

The romantic mystery of the rich Mr. Francis Ormond French's job as a chauffeur is the talk of New York. It sounds more like a thrilling movie than a chapter out of real life, but that's what it is. The story, illustrated by actual photographs, will appear in the magazine section of The Sunday Bee.

Additional Features in The Sunday Bee

- The Honorable Tony, a strange story of strange life in a strange part of the world. By Frances Noyes Hart.
- The first Christmas story. O. O. McIntyre tells it.
- Mark Sullivan's review of the political situation.
- Amé Martin's rare wit and unique philosophy.
- Thanksgiving, a camera symposium by Louis R. Bostwick in the rotogravure section.
- Four pages in colors of the best comics published anywhere.
- No "best" age for marriage, says Mary Johnston, famous author. Marry to please yourself, she advises.
- What's going on in the New York theaters. By Percy Hammond.
- Happyland, the department devoted to the youngsters.
- Fashion Fanny, the cutout for girls of all ages.
- Complete reports from staff writers on the Nebraska-Syracuse and Creighton-Oklahoma games.
- All the society and club news of Omaha and Council Bluffs.

And don't forget—The Sunday Bee is the only Sunday paper published in Nebraska that is served by three Saturday night news wires—The Associated Press, The International News Service and the Universal Service.

An invitation to the boys and girls

SATURDAY morning you are invited to meet Santa Claus, who will arrive in his aeroplane direct from the North Pole at 10 o'clock in the morning.

He arranged with the Field club to use our golf course as a landing field. He is coming to be in Toy Town at the Burgess-Nash store until Christmas time, but would like to have all the little boys and girls meet him here and accompany him down to their store.

Have your mother, father, brother or sister bring you to our club Saturday.
