Mrs. Pauline Yost Chides Officer Who Testified Dead Man Was Frequently Put Out of Saloon.

Mrs. Pauline Yost, 2807 W street, wept as she chided Police Sergeant Crawford for testifying against her deceased husband yesterday afternoon in District Judge Stauffer's court, where she is suing the city for $25,000 for the death of Mr. Yost two years ago, caused by drinking bootleg liquor, according to her allegations.

Crawford was the last witness and was leaving the courtroom after adjournment, when Mrs. Yost approached him, weeping.

"How could you say such a thing when you grew up around our neighborhood?" she cried.

Crawford testified that when he was a boy, he often saw Yost put out of Joe Eggers' saloon, Twenty-eighth and W streets, at closing time.

Police Captain William Russell, Inspector John Pisanowski, former Captain John Briggs, Motorcycle Officer Chester George, Sergeants William Carney and Charles Morton, Detectives Ben Danbaum and Fred Palmtag, and Joe Jacobs and Allen Kohan, newspaper reporters, testified that Commissioner Dunn and Chief of Police Dempsey often urged the strict enforcement of the liquor laws.

"Dunn said in a speech to the force that if we did not enforce the law he would get officers who would," Pisanowski testified.

Toy Circus Will Be Opened Today

Brandeis Store Will Open Showing of Christmas Gifts for Children With Parade.

Up north where reindeer's tears become icicles before an eye can be winked, Santa Claus is working overtime to produce enough Christmas toys for kiddies of the world.

But, right here in Omaha, he has established a branch station, where the toys may be seen even before Christmas. This branch will be opened this morning on the eighth floor of the Brandeis store and E. John Brandeis, who is giving it his personal attention, believes it will be the biggest toy display in this country.

To celebrate the opening of this great toy department, there will be a parade through downtown streets this morning at 11. In the parade will be a tiny calliope drawn by four shetland ponies from the Thompson pony farm at Dorchester, Neb.; clowns, toy bears, leopards, tigers, lions and regular circus wagons on a small scale.

"But, after all, what is the use of a parade unless there is a circus to follow?" reasoned Mr. Brandeis. So there is to be a circus on the eighth

Apple Production Declines in Nebraska

Lincoln, Nov. 23.—The number of bushels of commercial apples available for sale this year by Nebraska producers is 55 per cent less than in 1922, federal estimates show.

The decrease is attributed to the lack of facilities for fighting spring frosts, and to the general inattention received by Nebraska's orchards.

The state is co-operating with Montague Hancock of the Omaha Chamber of Commerce in a survey of the state apple situation with the view of improving orchards.

The federal figures show that Nebraska raised this year 880,000 bushels, as opposed to 1,620,000 in 1922. There is also a falling off reported in national apple bushels, with 194,000,000 bushels available in 1923, whereas 1922 saw 201,000,000 bushels come into the markets.

Nature Lover and Farmer Dies at Merrick Co. Home

Grand Island, Neb., Nov. 23.—Carsten Boesemann, one of the pioneers of Merrick county and an interesting nature lover, died at his home. Taking up raw prairie over 50 years ago, he grew several small parks about his place, excavated small lakes for water fowl and in one 10 to 20-acre tract established a few deer, which were given all of their native conditions and forage it was possible to give. Migratory water fowl of every description were captured and observed, no one ever being permitted to shoot in or near the premises. He came to this country from Germany as a young man, and for over 40 years was an active farmer with his love for animals always reflected in his horses and other stock. A year ago, he and his wife, who survives him, had all plans laid for the celebration of their golden wedding, when he was suddenly stricken with paralysis. Besides his wife, he leaves one son, Charles, several daughters and a number of grandchildren.
