Governor Urges Women to Unite to Obtain Laws

Political Divisions Declared Harmful—Coolidge Has Big Lead in Woman's Club Straw Vote.

"If the women will get together as a unit through their civic clubs and support the measures that the people are asking for, as they did for instance in the stand they took in the support of the party circle in the last election, they will be getting better legislation," declared Gov. Charles Bryan, who addressed the Omaha Women's club Monday afternoon in the Burgess-Nash auditorium on "What Women Can Do by Intelligent Voting." The speaker was introduced by Mrs. Millard Lanfield, leader of the political and social science department, in charge of the program.

"The senate defeated every bill passed by the legislature in the last session simply because of party politics," Governor Bryan told the club women. "The women cannot hope to improve legislation if there is to be a division among them as there is among the men in such nonpartisan measures as the co-operating marketing bill, the rural credit bill and municipal ownership bill for public utilities. Too much party affiliation is a hindrance to intelligent voting," the speaker declared.

In the straw vote for president, Mrs. H. C. Sumney announced that Calvin Coolidge received 94 votes; C. E. Hughes, 15; William McAdoo, 28; Woodrow Wilson, 8; Henry Ford, 8; Herbert Hoover, 6; Hiram Johnson, 3; R. M. La Follette, 4; Clifford Pinchot, 2; O. W. Underwood, 1; Frank Lowden, 1; and Charles Bryan, 1. Only 176 of the 651 club members voted. To poll is being taken in women's clubs throughout the country at the request of Mrs. Thomas Winter, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

During the business hour, the club voted $25 to the Community Chest fund and went on record in its approval of the annual Thanksgiving voluntary offering among the children of the public schools. Mrs. Edward Johnson, in charge of the Women's exchange, which is sponsored by the club, announced that the $109 loan made by the club to the exchange last spring had been paid. Mrs. H. J. Holmes, leader of the speech education department, reported that $40 had been added to the club building fund from the matinee luncheon last Wednesday.

Miss Katherine McCormick of the near-east headquarters in New York, urged the club women to support Golden Rule Sunday, December 2, when contributions will be taken up for the near east relief fund.

Short Stories of the Year

Thirteen volumes of short stories, compelling in interest, mark the literature of this fall. Nine of these are British, one French and the others American. This, according to Mrs. Anthony French Merrill in her Monday lecture on literature.

"In her eager love of art, Katherine Mansfield has completed and perfected a definite method of style and ideas," said Mrs. Merrill in speaking of the author's "The Dove's Nest" and "The Garden Party." "This may be termed the age of Katherine Mansfield. Her skill, power and vision are marvelous though I do not always like her stark presentations of the most intimate things."

Mrs. Merrill declared "Her books will remain lasting exposition of this age." The author died at 29.

"The Riddle," by Walter De La Marr, and "The Celestial Omnibus," by E. M. Foster, were named as widely discussed books. "Aerial Tales," by May Sinclair, "Lady Into Fox," by David Garnett, "Gainsborough," "Captives," "Changeling," by Don Byrne; "The Best Magazine Short Stories," edited by O'Brien Courton; "My Fair Lady," by Hemon, also deceased; "The Eighth Wonder," by A. S. M. Hutchinson; "Thirty-one Stories by English Authors," and the "Shadowy Third," by Ellen Glasgow; the Harper prize story, "The Able McLaughlins," by Margaret Wilson, were named and discussed as sort story literature.

"The Son at the Front," the novel by Edith Wharton, Mrs. Merrill called a profound work of art, "one of the splendid and comprehensive pictures of the war." "The Able McLaughlins" she termed "rougher, but vital, humorous, tragic and noble."

"The End of the House of Allard" by Sheila Kaye-Smith, was mentioned as an interesting English story.

"A Lost Lady," by Cather, was called "one of the most exquisite bits of writing and portraiture given us in America, a classic." Mrs. Forrester was not spiritual, not religious, not moral, but a wonderful, charming good natured social being, a lady as far as taste, manners and preferences went, according to Mrs. Merrill.

"Futility," by Gerhardt, and "Possession," by Mayo de La Roche; "The House of Youth," by Maude Warren; "Gray Weather," by Sackville West; "The Winding Stair," by E. W. Mason; "Lonely Furrow," by Maude Dwyer; and "The Lengthened Shadow," by W. J. Locke, were novels included in the morning's talk.

Wants to See Ex-Husband Before Second Marriage

Man Is So Fond of Her Child Wants to Be Its Father—Doubts Love of Woman Who Would See First Husband Before Giving Him Promise—She Should Be More Sure.

By MARTHA ALLEN.

WHEN a wife-to-be wants to see her ex-husband before making any promise to the second husband, there would seem to be a faltering of affection. Her fondness for her first husband would spoil the happiness of the second marriage, I should think. The woman in question, writes S. O., has a child. She cares a great deal for him, he says, and he is very fond of the child. He wants to be a father to this child.

Why not wait until the woman has fully made up her mind to see no more of her first husband? There is no hurry about your marriage. Try her out and test her affection for you. Give up seeing her for some time and she may decide in a hurry that she needs you to complete her happiness. She may be one of those women who is always undecided, keeping herself in a wavering state of mind as well as those about her. Don't let the little child prey upon your affections. Remember you will have to care more for the woman than the child to make the marriage a success. Second marriage for some women is just an experiment like the first. Any one who marries a second time should make it a huge success, for she has learned by experience her shortcomings and capabilities of making others happy.

The Busy Allie.
Dear Miss Allen: I am 18 and in love with a man five years my senior. Although we are crazy about each other, he only comes to see me about twice a month and I can't understand it. I see him most every day because he lives just a block from me. It seems to me if he really cares that he could find time to see me more often. I have been going a long time with him just this way.

It looks as if this man was not so crazy about you as you are about him, Sue. Try going out with other men when the opportunity comes along and your negligent lover will manage his affairs so as to see you more often if he really cares for you. Few men let busy hours interfere entirely with plans to see a certain girl at least once a week. Be indifferent yourself and see if he likes it.

Did YOUR SON Die to Make the Politicians Wealthy?

Hearst's International forced public hearings at Washington on the theft of a billion and a half dollars. This money was intended for disabled veterans. They only got $500,000,000 out of two billion dollars.

The other billion and a half went to crooked politicians and crooked contractors. Only a little of the truth came out at Washington.

We know all the truth. Another big slice of it is in Hearst's International for December. It shows what kind of a man the politicians will put in high office when it is part of their game. It gives further examples of where the money goes.

The job is only just begun.

That job will not be finished unless the American public are allowed to have light on what the politicians do when there is a big bunch of money to get hold of.

We are shedding this light so that the rest of the money given up by the American people to help disabled veterans will not also be stolen.

Is the Pork Barrel to be the Monument to our Fallen Heroes?

Also in December What Ford's Restless Mind Is Doing Now—Was the Klan Senator Elected by Fraud?—Is Bishop Brown Crazy?—Mary Garden's Own Life Story, and other important articles. Stories by Gilbert K. Chesterton, Gouverneur Morris, Kathleen Norris, Inez Haynes Irwin, James B. Connolly, and other world-famous authors.
