New Zoning Law

Opponents Claim---Opinions Vary.

City planning commission held an open meeting Friday night at the city nall, to listen to recommendations of amendments and requested changes and revisions of the proposed alteration in the existing zoning ordinance There were few objections to the proposed ordinance, according to I.

Shuler, one of the commission. "The few objections which were of fered were not serious," he said. "All were positive in their statements that rather than be without a zoning ordinance of any kind, they would be in favor of the one in hand."

Residents along Thirty-eighth avenue between Dodge and Jackson streets objected to the making of that where apartment houses and hotels may be built.

Belt Line District. The belt line district came in for its share of controversy. G. H. Carlberg believes that the ordinance is too strict in naming the businesse which may not locate in that section He said that were it not for this re striction it would be possible fo Omaha to have more industries. Charles B. Keller led the speakers from Thirty-eighth avenue. N. P. Dodge said that while he did not favor every point in the proposed ordinance, he favored the general plan.

S. A. Lewis thought that the city would be better off if permitted to expand and build up by itself with his father-in-law, Norman Walter, out the intervention of planning boards.

William Johnson, president of Castelar Improvement club, brought up the question of whether a gas con tainer could be erected, as proposed at Twenty-fourth and Dorcas streets He was told that there was no law ordinance forbidding it.
