

Speedy Trial Given Violator of Dry Law

Less than two hours after he had been arrested, Charles E. Day, 2021 California street, was fined $400 and his automobile confiscated by Federal Judge Woodrough.

Prohibition Agent Samardick arrested Day in front of his home and seized 13 gallons of moonshine whisky which was in Day's car, at 1 yesterday afternoon. He was charged with possession and transportation of liquor, and pleaded guilty at 2:30. He was given 10 days to pay the fine. Day was last in the limelight when his 15-year-old wife refused to leave him, despite the protests of her family over their marriage.

Samardick made the arrest shortly after Judge Woodrough handed down his far reaching decision which held that Samardick and other federal prohibition agents were not "civil officers" and therefore not entitled to search and seizure warrants.

AT THE THEATERS

Diminutive Star Is Handicapped by Size

Only four feet, nine and one-half inches. That is the height of Miss Edith Thayer, prima donna of the operetta, "Blossom Time," now at the Brandeis theater. Miss Thayer is even smaller than the little Viennese star, Mital Hajos. It is difficult for this actress to find a suitable role. Her size makes it necessary for her to play boy parts or those of a little girl. Miss Thayer was formerly starred in "Tom, Tom," "Katinika" and "Firefly." Her home is in Boston and she studied voice in Paris. She was understudy for Tetrazini, the opera star, for a number of years. "I have to have my costumes made on long lines to make me look taller, and wear slippers with heels built up," said Miss Thayer. "The terrors who usually sing opposite me are big and tall. I am denied opportunity to sing in grand opera just because I am so short. I weigh about 105 pounds."

In the story of Franz Schubert's life, which is told in "Blossom Time," the sweetheart of the musician was as small in stature as Miss Thayer. The unusual experience of playing the first of a play in one theater and then crossing the street to play the second act in another theater was experienced by Miss Thayer in New York city. "Blossom Time" was playing in two theaters on Broadway at the same time, one production in the Forty-fourth Street theater and the other in the Shubert theater. At one evening's performance of the shows the entire cast of one exchanged theaters with the other. Between the first and second acts, actresses and actors were seen hurrying across Forty-fourth street in their hoop skirts and pantelettes, much to the delight of passersby. The exchange was announced to each audience, said Miss Thayer, and received with hearty applause. The second company of "Blossom Time" is now playing on the Pacific coast.

Benny Leonard Comedian as Well as Ring Star

Meet Benny Leonard, the actor. Now that he's successfully launched upon a stage career, Leonard wants to be identified by his ability to make Orpheum theater patrons laugh instead of being known for his prowess with the gloves. To begin with, Leonard has a stage personality. He hasn't the appearance of a boxer. No cauliflower ear, the toughened nose, the hardened knuckles and the stony jaw. Rather a matinee idol type. Leonard does a hilariously funny boxing travesty with Herman Timberg, the versatile comedian, but otherwise Leonard has not employed any ring stunts to put him over. He

Miss Hansen Invites Public to Reception

Juanita Hansen, motion picture star, who is telling the graphic story of how she fought and won a battle against narcotics, will hold an informal reception at the World tomorrow afternoon.

Immediately following the matinee performance Miss Hansen will meet the ladies on the mezzanine floor and will be glad to answer any questions. Miss Hansen has intimate knowledge of the harm wrought by drugs and will be glad to give any information that cannot be discussed from the stage.

A little over two years ago, Miss Hansen was given up as incurable and with but a few months to live. At that time she weighed 95 pounds. Today she is the picture of health and following her vaudeville tour will resume picture activity.

The seat sale for the Little Theater production at the Brandeis, December 13, will be open to the public on December 7. Popular prices of 25 cents, 35 cents, 50 cents and 75 cents will bring this within the means of all who are interested.

In only the single respect that both are funny do Shannon and Leeming, of "Happily Ever After," appearing at the Gayety for this week's entertainment of Columbia Burlesque fame, match each other. Leeming is of the size slingers designate as half-pint, while Shannon is considerably more than a fathom deep when measured from his head down as he stands. Leeming is more "meaty" than Shannon in the matter of bone-covering of flesh. Shannon is not nearly so plump as a well-seasoned clothes pole. But when it comes to creating laughs—Shannon and Leeming run a race that would make the Zev-in-Memoriam match look like an intervening length of daylight had shown. Ladies bargain matinee at 2:15 daily.

Chauncey O'cott in his great success, "The Heart of Paddy Whack," will appear at the Brandeis two nights only, next Friday and Saturday, and Saturday matinee. "Paddy Whack" was written for

Mr. O'cott by Rachel Crothers and served him well for two transcontinental tours. It is in this play also that the four favorite ballads of the sweet singer occur. "A Broth of a Boy," "Who's the Laddie," "Huck O' Mine," and "A Little Bit of Heaven."

The most opulent and extravagant metropolitan girl-and-music spectacle that new fourth annual production of the Greenwicks Village Follies which comes to the Brandeis on next Sunday for a four night engagement.

This is a play directed around excellence in comedy, song and dance, with music that is a blend of stage and screen, and is devised and staged by John Murray Anderson. It is in two acts and a scene, and is heralded as the most genuinely humorous show in this gay and galloping series.

A marked improvement in proper enunciation on the stage is being manifested, according to Howard Marsh, who plays the leading tenor role of Franz Schubert today, matinee and night only.

"Proper enunciation is one of the most necessary requisites for a successful stage career," said the singer in his dressing room, "and set it on the most neglected features of the footlights profession. In the last two seasons, however, I have observed a fine improvement on the part of vocalists in the matter of singing distinctly. Undoubtedly the stage director is better, and, too, there is a keener competition among singers for the leading roles in operetta. But whatever the reason, there is an opportunity for an expansion of real optimism in respect for the future of musical production in this country."

"Vamping Along," now current at the New Empire, is a laugh show par excellence. It is a splendid stage spectacle, featuring the Gravas Bros. Players and Roy Kline, comedians of unlimited opportunity for the promotion of laughter. "Keep Smiling," said to be even more humorous in dialogue and plot, is the new show scheduled for the week starting Saturday.

Triangle Club Hears Talk on Insurance

A. S. Borglum, president of the Triangle club, spoke to the members of his organization yesterday at luncheon in Hotel Fontenelle on the subject of life insurance.

"It is estimated that the life insurance companies of the world will finish this year with a total of $12,000,000,000 of new business written and they will start the new year with approximately $22,000,000,000 of risks on their books," Mr. Borglum said.

He asserted that the first life insurance policy of which there is any written record was issued in Belgium on June 15, 1543. Other statistical information given by the speaker included the following: Forty millions of people in the United States carry life insurance. At the close of this year there will be nearly ten billions of reserve funds invested by insurance companies. During 1922, the largest single payment by one company was $3,000,000. During 1922 there were 70,000 deaths of persons who had paid only one premium each, their beneficiaries receiving $45,000,000.
