

Official Scores Tax Free Bonds

Lieutenant Governor Speaks Before Convention of Commissioners Here.

Lieutenant Governor Fred G. Johnson condemned tax free securities when he spoke before county officials at a banquet at Hotel Rome Thursday night. "If taxation without representation is unjust, why is not representation without taxation equally unjust?" he asked.

"Recently a great millionaire died leaving an estate of $67,000,000," said Mr. Johnson. "More than $43,000,000 of this estate was tax exempt securities. It is our duty and obligation to the on-coming generation of this country to see to it that this un-American thing does not long exist."

that is in your hands," he asked the county officers. "You have to do with the administration of the public business that is closest to the needs of the people, and a great responsibility confronts anyone who aids in the administration of our political affairs. "A courthouse square means almost as much to me as a statehouse square, and a square courthouse means just as much to me as a square statehouse. It is as important that we have worthy men in our courthouse as it is that we have worthy men in our statehouse. To make our city, county and state or nation a better place in which to live is all there is to clean politics, and that is the work of a real true politician."

"We do not need any more laws to make business better," he continued. "The American people when left alone for a reasonable length of time can solve any problem confronting them. During the last 12 months fully 60,000 bills dealing with business have been introduced in our state legislatures and an average of 1,000 per month all through 1923 were enacted in law. In the last five congresses 90,000 bills were introduced and 2,400 passed. Certainly we do not need any more, directly or indirectly favoring tax free securities. It is our duty and obligation to the next generation of Americans to abolish this condition. We do need those laws of that class in effect repealed and every security should be taxed its just proportion."

Alien Smuggling Plot Revealed

By Associated Press.
Malone, N. Y., Dec. 15.—While searching for bootleggers along the Canadian border, federal agents and the "black horse" troop of the state police have stumbled on what is evidently a gigantic plot to smuggle aliens into this country.

So far this month 50 aliens have been caught along the frontiers of the four northeastern counties of the state, it was authoritatively learned today. This party confirms a report made public at the national industrial conference in New York, quoting Secretary of Labor Davis as saying that as many as 1,000 aliens daily were being illegally brought into the United States.

The aliens as a rule are of a desirable type, but have been heard from entering this country because the immigration quotas for the year have been filled. Most of the aliens taken into custody in recent weeks have been Irish, English and Swedish.

A small proportion were Italian. Many of them are trained workmen and expert farmers. The authorities reported today that they believed they had the liquor smuggling situation well in hand. Admitting that large quantities had been poured over the line in recent weeks, they pointed to the fact they had seized more than 75 laden cars in the last two and one-half months as proof of their vigilance.

Uncle Sam's Clinic for Punctured Christmas Parcels

Omaha has a new hospital. It is the first of its kind in the city. We have regular hospitals, doll hospitals, and animal hospitals but the new one is in the large mail room of the Omaha postoffice. It isn't finished entirely in white enamel, it hasn't shining metals or terrifying instruments of torture. But, like any hospital, it has an operating table, hospital supplies and a doctor. This hospital was started a year ago.

The doctor who started the hospital is W. N. Erickson, an employee of the Omaha postoffice for 33 years. Torn and broken packages that are found in the mail are sent to the hospital in a section of the mail room. The packages are piled on trucks and on the operating table where Mr. Erickson stands at his work. This doctor's hours are in the morning when packages from the night sorting of mail are sent to him for repairs. Before Mr. Erickson saw the need for this hospital, broken packages with contents sometimes spilling out were thrown under the tables for investigation at a later time or to be sent to the "dead package" office. But now these packages are taken to the hospital to be mended, rewrapped and patched up so they can be shipped.

At the operating table Mr. Erickson stands, gathering up spilled birdseed and putting it back in its package, wrapping a package on which the address is nearly obliterated by melted butter, or scooping up paint from a can that has been broken open in shipment. Scissors, heavy wrapping paper and stout string are in use at this table throughout the morning.

"One of the saddest cases I have had for some time came in the other day," said Mr. Erickson. "A beautiful big-eyed doll had its head completely smashed. I suppose some iron auto part happened to be shipped next to it and it broke in the jolting. Some little girl is going to be broken hearted. The doll's head was in so many pieces that I could only gather up the broken bits and send them on to the destination. "It is a queer thing, but honey seems to burst out of the cans more than liquid paints. Then we do have a sticky time of it. When bottles of flavoring extract are broken, the air is pungent with odors. Spilled coffee, tea, flour, and jars of fruit, sent by some relative, that are broken in transit are some of the things Mr. Erickson must handle. Little chicks are penned up again in case they are trying to escape and live lizards are watched carefully at this hospital by the doctor.

"This is the only hospital for post-office packages in the country, I believe," said Erickson. "I should have started it long ago." Christmas time is the busy season at the hospital. Burs broken from rocking horses are collected, crying dolls rewrapped and spilled games gathered together. Mr. Erickson could easily find a job in the Santa Claus factory.

Germans Ask Parley.
Brussels, Dec. 15.—The German charge here, Herr Roediger, presented to Foreign Minister Jasper today a request for conversations with the Belgian government regarding the occupation of the Ruhr and questions relation to the Rhineland. The request was parallel to that made by Herr Von Hoersch, the German charge, to Premier Poincare in Paris. M. Jasper replied that he would give his answer later, after discussing the subject with M. Poincare.

Coolidge O. K.'s S. D. Candidacy

By International News Service.
Washington, Dec. 15.—Official announcement was made at the White House today that President Coolidge would be a candidate for the republican nomination in the South Dakota primaries next spring. The president wrote a letter to Sam Elrod, former governor of South Dakota, and his chief supporter in the recent republican state convention, authorizing him to enter his name in the primary ballots in that state.

President Coolidge Unrecognized While Window Shopping

Washington, Dec. 15.—The president of the United States, overcoatless and gloveless, in blue serge suit and pearl gray felt hat, walked virtually unrecognized last evening through crowds of Christmas shoppers muffled to the eyes against winter winds.

The president's brisk walk took him through the heart of the shopping district. His overcoatless figure, in the face of a freezing temperature, caused some people to glance at him twice, but only a few seemed to recognize him.

Mr. Coolidge did just seven blocks of window shopping during his walk. He failed to stop once, although on one occasion he hesitated before a shop displaying women's gowns and wraps.

Once, as he started to cross the street, the snarl of an auto horn started him and he stepped back to let the car pass. On two occasions he stood unrecognized in a crowd of Christmas shoppers waiting a traffic policeman's whistle to stop the flow of motors and horses and wagons. A single secret service operative, E. W. Starling, accompanied the president on his Christmas window shopping expedition.
