Nursing League Convention Today

Mrs. Hattie Plumb Williams, professor of sociology in the University of Nebraska, will give one of the leading papers today at the afternoon session of the State League of Nursing Education, on "Social Service and the Nurse." Florence McCabe and Grace Buckley of Omaha will lead in its discussion.

Miss Bertha Bryant, superintendent of the Grand Island hospital, will read a paper on "Teaching in the Nebraska Schools of Nursing," discussed by Sister Edwards, Lincoln, Lenore Gosner and Jean Rinault, Omaha. Myra Tucker will present the teaching of the history of nursing, which will be discussed by Florence Grubb and Ella Coffin.

The convention will open at 3:30 p. m. in the city council chamber, city hall. Officers will report, including Miss Charlotte Burgess, superintendent at the University of Nebraska School of Nursing, president; Ellenore Reed, vice president, Bertha Bryant, superintendent Grand Island hospital, secretary; Anita Lewis, superintendent of nurses at Mary Manning hospital, Hastings, treasurer.

Student Volunteer Meet Held Soon

The national conference of the Student Volunteer Movement, to be held in Indianapolis, Ind., from December 28 to January 1, was set forth by Dr. Walter Judd, president of the Student Volunteers of America, at the Monday morning convocation of the University of Omaha. The organization holds such a conference every four years, and gathers together thousands of students from all parts of the country. Its purpose is to direct the attention of young people toward foreign missions.

"In my opinion the student volunteer conference is more important in bettering the conditions of the world than was the peace conference of Versailles."

Four main addresses that will be the feature of this year's conference are Economic Conditions, International and Political Topics, Racial Questions and Youth Movements, the Remembrance that dominates the far east particularly.

Each college is allowed one delegate for every 100 students up to 800, then one for every 200. No more than 40 may represent one school. The number of delegates that may attend is limited to 5,000 students and 1,000 teachers, missionaries and secretaries. Three hundred attended the first conference in 1891.

The representatives chosen at the University of Omaha are Miss Grace Winter, instructor; Miss Pauline Nelson, Kenneth Baker and Joe Houston. Miss Ruth Arlander and Russell Mattson have been chosen as alternates.

Martha Allen PROBLEMS THAT PERPLEX.

HERE'S a girl of 27 who wants to marry a boy of 22 years even though he has been the sole support of his mother and a sister for seven years. It seems to me there is no way out but to give up this youth.

In the letter signed Anxious, the girl states that she has been going with this young man for four years, with the understanding that in two years more they would be married. She adds that she has had a better education and is better off financially, but she doesn't care for that, she says, for they love each other. The girl's mother objects to the match. But the girl goes on believing that on a little work on her part together with what he earns that they would soon have a good start in life.

There apparently are a great many obstacles in the way of marriage with this young man. The mere fact that he is five years younger than the girl is not an impossible barrier, but it means that he may not be mature enough to take such a serious step as marriage. He may change his view point of life before he is 30. Both might be very unhappy together before the age of 30 is reached.

The fact that he is the sole support of the mother and sister is an important consideration. Should anyone make these two suffer through the selfish desire for happiness? If it is necessary that he continue to support the mother and sister, it would seem out of the question to add to the young man's burdens. A girl would not be happy if she forced the man to disloyalty to his mother and sister.

The mother's disapproval is probably based upon a sane recognition of these facts. They are such big obstacles that they outweigh love, understanding of each other, and the happiness sought in this case.

It may seem very hard to sacrifice love now but the girl will be happier if she faces the music now and understands fully the troubles that could arise in such a situation.

Only a Friend.

Dear Miss Allen: I am 24 and have been going about with a girl of 18 for seven months. I want to know if she is doing right by telling me that she can only be a friend. The reason she tells me, is that I am only earning $46 a week. This summer she met a man making more money and thinks she will get a better bargain by going out with him. What shall I do? ANXIOUS.

There is no use chasing a girl who is looking for a husband or good deals in the business of matrimony. She is so mercenary that it would be best to let her go. If you are earning a small salary and even had an opportunity for advancement you couldn't hold such a girl who sets her heart on worldly things. She would only make you unhappy if you did marry her. Look for a girl who might care no more for you than she would be willing to forego the luxuries. Don't make an effort to hold her. Put your mind on making a success of yourself and you'll unknowingly seek a better type of girl.

Reader: A stork shower, a collection of gifts for the expectant mother, could be attractively arranged by putting the gifts brought by the guests into a basket, or small baby basket. These gifts usually include bibs, rattles, teething rings, booties, a baby dress or small blanket.

If you have any love problems or other questions you want answered, write to Martha Allen and they will be answered in the order they are received.

Ukrainian Chorus Which Sings at Auditorium December 29

THE UKRAINIAN NATIONAL CHORUS
WHOM EUROPEAN CRITICS REFERRED TO AS A "HUMAN SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA"
A "HUMAN PIPE ORGAN," "MOST DISCIPLINED STRING QUARTET."

Singers in the Ukrainian National chorus which appears at the city Auditorium on December 29 are expressive in two arts. Not only has their marvelous singing delighted America, but the colorful embroidery on the costumes of the women shows an equal fondness for decorative art.

When an American woman expresses her individuality and her love of beauty, she usually does it by organizing culture clubs and welfare clubs, or by obtaining a bob, a smock, and a supply of paint brushes and getting busy on the furniture. The Ukrainian woman requires no more for a riot of self-expression than the old-fashioned thimble and needle and a profusion of skeins of bright silk, scarlet, blue, orange, green and yellow. The embroidery goes upon their silk aprons, blouses and sleeves. Their white wool Cosack coats have orange frogs and bindings. Their sleeveless black velvet jackets are adorned with sequins and red velvet pointsettias. A red satin skirt, crimson boots, and a flowered head-dress wound turbanwise about the head, complete the picturesque costume of the Ukrainian women, with numerous strings of brightly colored beads as the finishing touch. The men are equally gorgeous in their kaftans of blue, green or brown, and white wool Cosack coats adorned

Omaha Women's Club
Pictures and souvenirs collected during a 15-day trip in Alaska were shown by Mrs. Edgar Allen in illustrating her talk on that territory at the meeting of the current topics division of the Omaha Women's club yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Allen directed the meeting and was assisted by Mrs. Charles E. Johannes, who told about totem poles; Mrs. A. I. Creigh, who discussed the immense foreign resources of Alaska, and Mrs. John Sebré, who presented President Harding's trip.

Tribute to President Harding and the belief that had he lived something would have been done before now to relieve Alaskan perplexities was expressed by Mrs. Sebré, Mrs. Sebré differed from Mrs. Creigh, who felt that profiteers and foreign syndicates had nearly ruined Alaska, by presenting a much more optimistic picture, she admitted, however, that graft was seriously hampering the administration of the territory.

Portmanteau Play Is Musical Treat

That the engagement of Stuart Walker's Portmanteau Theater company at the Brandeis theater on the coming Friday and Saturday is to be a musical treat as well as one of the outstanding dramatic events of the season is evidenced by the announcement that the company carries its own orchestra and that the musical program which accompanies the presentation of most of the plays is one of the most delightful features of the productions.

Grasping the subtle essence of a literary work and transforming it into music requires a nice artistic vision as well as much musical talent. And when the work assumes the elusiveness, the charm and variety of the plays of Stuart Walker and Lord Dunsany the task is doubly difficult. To Herbert E. Hyde, Chicago composer, goes the credit for having provided the musical settings for the plays in the Portmanteau repertory. Mr. Hyde is a well-known musician and was recently associated with the Chicago Symphony orchestra. He is the author of numerous musical compositions, including an opera and an oratorio.

The Friday night performance of Mr. Walker's company will include "Sir David Wears a Crown," "The Medicine Show" and the Japanese phantasy, "The Lady of the Weeping Willow Tree." At the Saturday matinee will be given "Six Who Pass While the Lentils Boil" and "The King's Great Aunt" and on Saturday night, Dunsany's "The Gods of the Mountain" and "The Murderers" and Mr. Walker's two interludes, "The Very Naked Boy" and "Nevertheless."

The musical program which has been arranged for Lord Dunsany's play, "The Gods of the Mountain," is an especially delightful one.

University of Omaha
The holiday calendar of the university is filled with many celebrations. The sorority dances will be given at the Blackstone. Kappa Psi Delta, December 21; Sigma Chi Omicron, December 25; Pi Omega Phi; December 26; Phi Delta Psi, December 29. The fraternities Phi Sigma Phi and Theta Phi Delta have their dances on December 28.

The Kappa Psi Deltas initiated Josephine Berry, Ruth Betts, Mary Davis, Alice Everson, Maxine Foster, Marion Gray, Mary Helmer, Helen Hoover, Gertrude Jones, Helen Krey, Gertrude Longman and Mildred Whitaker Sunday, December 16, at the home of Miss Mary Mann.

Prepares Novel Celebration

Mrs. H. B. Bergquist is in charge of preparations for the Christmas celebration of the Omaha College club for the Social Settlement house on Saturday. College club members are to meet Wednesday afternoon from 1 to 5 at the home of Mrs. Bergquist, 2509 A street, to pack the boxes of candy, toys, and gifts which are a part of this annual event. A light tea will be served by the hostesses to the volunteer Santa Clauses.

The Christmas tree will be trimmed Friday morning at Swift and Company's office building where the celebration will be held Saturday. The building is opposite the Social Settlement house, which is not yet ready for use in this way.

Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

Madge was oppressed by the lurking menace. I stood for a minute in the opened door, motionless, listening, with the sense of something sinister lurking just out of my sight. But there was no sign of life anywhere, and when the apartment door opposite mine opened and a group of people in evening dress came out laughing and chatting gaily, I hastily shut the door I was holding open and retreated into my own living room. I gave a mental salute to my sister-in-law. She had not stirred from her seat, and her voice was low and composed, although her eyes, intent, alert, showed that she had shared my alarm.

Madge doesn't know.

"What did you see?" she asked quietly, with a wary eye upon the bedroom door, from which came the laughing voices of Dicky and Edwin. I recognized her thought and shared it. If either man knew of the individual who had lurked, eavesdropping, he would go storming in pursuit, risking either a shot, if the intruder had sinister intent, or a ludicrously futile fuss if, as I more than half suspected, the espionage originated from the childish curiosity of the Marks family in the rear rooms of the apartment we were compelled to share with them.

"I don't know," I returned slowly. "I just caught a glimpse of a waving dark garment as the door slammed. My impression is that it was heavy cloth, but whether it was a man's overcoat or a woman's cloak, I have not the slightest idea."

"What made you think there was something there?"

"The upper part of the door is of shaded glass," I returned, "and I chanced to see the fleeting shadow of a hand which the eavesdropper was incautious enough to lift."

"You are quick-witted," she said meditatively, "but a bit rash to rush out like that. If you had caught the man I assume it was a man—in the act, he might have turned ugly."

"I am not sure it was a man," I returned slowly, and then I told her of the inordinate curiosity of my neighbor, Mrs. Marks, and of her habit of watching visitors to the apartment house through the aperture in the great upper hall window. The Men Appear.

"I should think she'd bear watching," Harriet commented, and then she clasped her quaint amber and jade necklace with protecting fingers. "I'm glad I'm wearing these," she said meditatively.

"So am I," I assented, "although I really don't believe we're in any danger of thieves. But what have you left in your room?"

"Nothing which would bankrupt me if it were stolen," she smiled. "Besides, as long as these things are not in my living room, I have a mental security of my specially made bag. Hush!"

The warning was not needed. I had seen the opening of the door into the bedroom and stifled the answer on my tongue. Dicky and Edwin came out, and I think my face reflected the widely pride which I saw in Harriet's. They were as personable men as one could wish to see, and for the minute I forgot the rancor which lingered in my heart against Dicky in my admiration of his good looks and manly bearing.

"Well! Here we are!" Dicky struck an absurd attitude. "Are our ties on straight, and our hair brushed properly? Gee, Harriet, but you're a knock-out in that rig! It's a wonder Ed dares to risk you out on Broadway. And my own senora isn't so worse. Did you order the limousine, Madge? Yes, I hear it now. Come, we'll help you on with the glad wraps. Let's go!"

He hurried us into our cloaks and down the stairs in his impetuous way. But even as I entered the restaurant I could not shake off the impression of something lurking menacing, in the building I had left behind.
