to Dr. Harvey

Preceeding the entrance of the bridal party Miss Grebe organist gave a half hour program.

The bride entered on the arm of her father, A. E. Langdon. She was clad in robes of ivory brocaded crepe romaine, which took on a pearl-like luster from the flesh-colored radium over which they were fashioned. Straight lines characterized her gown, and a train of satin embroidered in roses fell from her shoulders, half hidden by the veil which was held in a crown of rose point lace. Her bridal bouquet was a shower of lillies of the
