Another Mouse Born. Buy Your Overcoat. Score One for England. By ARTHUR BRISBANE

You know the fable about "The Mountain in Labor." Much groaning and cracking, and when the critical moment came, out popped a little mouse. That was the mountain's baby, about which it had been making all the fuss.

That story of the mountain must come back to Mr. Edward W. Bok as he contemplates the result of his $100,000 peace prize offer. It's a very small mouse that he got for his money.

That Bok prize peace plan will amuse you. Poor Mr. Bok must feel rather silly paying $50,000 for a suggestion that the people of the United States should do now what four years ago they refused to do with 7,000,000 votes to spare.

Go into the world court now and join the league on a modified basis is the $50,000 suggestion. It is as though serious people, discussing what they should have for dinner, should see a well meaning doggie drag in a cat long head and offer that as a solution.

The league of nations is a dead cat. The United States doesn't intend to join the league of nations, doesn't intend to pay Europe's bills, or be held responsible for them, and does not intend to enter any world court that would cause the affairs of the United States to be submitted to a foreign tribunal.

Mr. Bok can charge his $50,000 to experience. Get now the overcoat that you have perhaps neglected getting thus far. Cold waves are starting in the north and traveling in various directions.

There is no greater folly than to economize on the warmth that means health. One severe cold might cost you a great more than several dozen overcoats.

The British are building the biggest dam in the world on the Indus river. It will be a mile long, nearly a thousand feet high. Sixty-six gigantic steel gates will control the waters of the Indus, irrigating a territory, nearly as great as all England.

One single canal will supply water to 500,000 acres of rice land enough to feed millions of Hindus. This kind of building in India by the British is better than useless monuments that ancient rajahs used to build for their own comfort or glory.

It's better than Gandhi's suggestion of a boycott on the English, and going back to the hand loom. That one single British enterprise will do more to wipe out starvation in India than ever was done by all the rajahs that ever ruled the country. Let that be remembered to the credit of our British cousins.

Lenin of Russia, carrying bullets fired into him by at least two would-be assassins, and often pronounced dying or dead by newspapers, has been out twice recently hunting in the forest. He seems to have a constitution almost as tough as that of his soviet government.

One assassin tried to kill Kemal Pasha, up to date ruler of Turkey, and succeeded only in injuring his wife. Another assassin, of a sort hitherto unknown to Japan, threw a bomb against the royal palace.

It is hard for western people to understand what that means to the Japanese. The Mikado to them is still the "son of heaven" in spite of flying machines, tractors and machine guns.

It is quite likely that one or more Japanese of the ancient type will feel impelled, by duty, to commit hari-kari, ripping open the stomach with a knife especially made for the job, to express horror at the blasphemous attack on the mikado's holy body.

We see in the mikado only a very polite, well meaning gentleman. He means something much more than that to 80 per cent of the Japanese. (Copyright 1924)

Trotsky Must Take Rest. Moscow, Jan. 8.—An official bulletin says the acuteness of the malady of Leon Trotsky, the Russian soviet war minister, which resulted from an attack of influenza and from which he had suffered since November 5, makes it desirable that he immediately cease work and take absolute rest in a milder climate.

A medical examination showed that he had grown thinner and paler, that his working capacity had been reduced and that he had lost his appetite.

Proposes
1. That the United States shall immediately enter the Permanent Court of International Justice, under the conditions stated by Secretary Hughes and President Harding in February, 1923.

3. Substitute moral force and public opinion for the military and economic force originally implied in Articles X and XVII.
4. Safeguard the Monroe doctrine.
5. Accept the fact that the United States will assume no obligations under the treaty of Versailles except by act of congress.

7. Provide for the continuing development of international law.

Nina Putnam Hotly Denies Theft of Love

Noted Novelist Offers to Discharge Chauffeur Who, His Wife Charges, Writer Coveted.

By International News Service. New York, Jan. 8.—"Believe You Me," Nina Wilcox Putnam's next novel will not be entitled "Ladies and Their Chauffeurs," although it might be. Miss Putnam, or Putnam-Sanderson—the verdict is still out—said so in just those words today.

"I'll discharge Mr. Bassett this very minute if his wife says so," Miss Putnam promised in frank discussion of the triangular events of her life, involving Ellsworth F. Bassett, her six-foot blond New England clam-digger chauffeur-business agent, and his little postoffice clerk wife.

"I'm not the kind of a woman who would rob another woman of her husband—please say that for me," Miss Putnam insisted. "I have cried and cried over this thing—now I am mad, and hurt," Miss Putnam said, shaking her head as if she were blushing to show. Fire flashed from the eyes she inherited from her Spanish mother.

"I had always thought Gertrude—that is, Mrs. Bassett—my friend; I thought so until now. How she can say these things about me I cannot understand. Of course, I say it is immoral for man and wife to live together after love has died—most immoral. In the case of the Bassetts, I do not know if love's there or not—I have never inquired."

"I did not ask Gertrude to divorce her husband and give him to me," Miss Putnam said. "I do not believe in divorce—Oh, I know you will ask how I square that with my writings for easier divorce."

"Divorce sometimes becomes necessary—it became so in my case. The fault does not lie with marriage. It is with the people who marry. If it were easier there would be less divorce."

Miss Putnam made it clear she was going to fight. "Reputation Ruined." "My reputation has been ruined—ruined by malicious calumny," Miss Putnam said. "I want people to know the truth. Mr. Bassett is just an employe. I have treated him as such. He has driven my car and served as my business agent. I will discharge him this very minute if Mrs. Bassett says why I would rather cut off my right hand than hurt her—or any woman."

Miss Putnam said she would confer with her attorneys today and if necessary prepare an answer to any legal action which may be taken by Mrs. Bassett, alleging alienation of her husband's affections.

Miss Putnam said she had no intimation of Mrs. Bassett's charges when she left Florida, where, with Bassett, her secretary, and his wife, she has been wintering at her orange grove.

"I came home to straighten the legal tangle of my divorce from my second husband, B. J. Sanderson," Miss Putnam said. Miss Putnam was granted a divorce at Providence, R. I., her husband's home. The court then set the decree aside pending investigation of alleged collusion and fraud.

Woman Says She Passed Bad Coins

Mr. G. R. Walker, 32, 817 North Tenth street, arrested Monday for investigation of her relations with Harry Diuguid and Tom McCarthy, alleged counterfeiters, told police Tuesday morning the only counterfeit money she ever passed was two half dollars which Diuguid gave her.

He told her she could go to a show with the money, she said, but spent both coins at a grocery store instead.

Ethel Miller, 113 South Twentieth street, also was arrested Monday for investigation in connection with the two accused counterfeiters.

Girl Blames Nebraska's New Marriage Law for Her Being Arrested

Nebraska's new marriage law, which caused a postponement of her wedding to Fred Padgett, soldier at Fort Omaha, also caused the arrest of Lorena Kietzke of Deshler, Neb. she told juvenile authorities Tuesday morning.

She was arrested on complaint of rooming house proprietor that she and the soldier were living together at 1801 South Thirteenth street. Lorene says she is 19, and that she has known Padgett for more than a year. She said her parents knew she was coming to Omaha to marry him.

She was taken to Riverview home, pending investigation of the case by juvenile authorities.

Wife of Missing City Official Maintains Lonely Vigil Waiting Tearfully for Return of Mate She Still Loves

Mrs. Maybelle McKean Bossie Confident Her Husband Is "Just Around the Corner."

Mrs. Claude Bossie.

Maybelle McKean Bossie maintains a lonely vigil by day and by night for the return of her husband, Claude F. Bossie, former city clerk, whose unceremonious leave of a $300 a month city hall job has taken the city hall by its ears.

At the Bossie apartment, 2215 Howard street, the husband-beret little woman of less than 100 pounds displays remarkable fortitude. Her love has not yet turned to hate, but her soul is in conflict between the love that lingers and a pent-up feeling of wounded pride.

She refuses to resign herself to the "shadows and darkness and dust." She keeps peering into the 22nd void of things and hopes and hopes for the return of her husband.

"Oh, God, my poor brain; I don't know if I am going to last or not," she exclaimed, staunching her tears. "Can't Forget Him." "I'm so weary. People tell me to hold up. That's easier said than done. They say I should forget him; that he isn't worth worrying over. He was a wonderful husband to me. I have no regrets that I married him, although I gave 12 of the best years of my life to him."

She paused to observe her pet canary which chirped merrily as if to relieve the strain. The telephone bell rang and a woman offered encouraging words.

"Can a woman think too much of the man she wed?" Mrs. Bossie pondered over that thought, of whether she allowed her love to blind her to the practical side of things. And she repeated that she wanted her husband back and believed that he will come back.

She glanced furtively out the window as if to recognize someone moving in the distance, and she continued: "I don't know what has come over Claude. The poor devil; foolish, foolish man. I wonder how his brain is now, when he realizes he has no job. I trusted him implicitly. When he left

Norris Farm Body Approved

Corporation to Buy Products and Sell Abroad O. K'd by Congress Committee.

Washington, Jan. 8.—Farm aid legislation was considered today by the senate and house agriculture committees, with representatives of farm organizations in various sections appearing as witnesses.

General approval was given to the Norris-Sinclair bill proposing creation of a $100,000,000 corporation to purchase American farm products and to sell them at home and abroad. It was argued that such purchases would have the effect of increasing and stabilizing prices.

Early action on legislation pertaining to the grazing of livestock on ranges of the national forests was forecast today as a result of a conference between Secretary Wallace and senators and representatives from western states.

Owing to the depressed condition of the livestock industry in the range states, Secretary Wallace feels there should be no advance in the grazing fees until conditions in the industry warrants, and it is not likely any increase will be made until the grazing season of 1925.

He also recommended that grazing on all state and national public lands should be co-ordinated in the interest of efficiency, and he desires legislation which would permit, under certain conditions, addition to the national forests of contiguous unreserved public lands, chiefly valuable for grazing.

Creation and designation of national ranges, comprising unreserved public lands, valuable chiefly for grazing, under the administration of the secretary of agriculture, also is sought.

Under a resolution ordered favorably reported today by the senate agriculture committee, the secretary of agriculture would be directed to determine through the grain futures administration the position on wheat market taken by the well known professional speculators and members of the large "futures" commission houses of the Chicago board of trade. The findings would be published.

The resolution recites that since the supreme court declared the grain futures act unconstitutional, members of the Chicago board of trade and other grain exchanges, with few exceptions, "have systematically opposed the price of wheat, or in trade terms, tried to bear the market."

A. E. Bowen of Minneapolis, representing the Farmers' Stabilization association, told the senate agriculture committee that the state of North Dakota could not be sold for enough to pay the total indebtedness, mortgage and bonds. He pictured a very serious situation in the middle and northwestern states. Illustrating his point, he said a Kansas farmer bought a binder in 1901 at a cost equivalent to 120 bushels of wheat, and in 1922 the same kind of a binder represented a cost equivalent of 258 bushels of wheat.

Mr. Bowen told of an instance where white potatoes were bought at the farm in the Red river valley of Minnesota at 35 cents a hundred pounds and sold wholesale at Safford, Kan., at $1.50 per hundred pounds. The freight rate, he said, was 55 cents, giving the wholesaler a profit of 60 cents.

W. W. Fitzwater of Banham, Tex., president of the Farm Labor Union of America, said it was the purpose of his organization to fix and control the price of farm products. The number of tenant farmers in Texas, he said, has increased by several hundred since 1920 because of the sale of farms to pay off mortgages and taxes.

Married Life One Big Honey-moon Until Eight Months Ago. Says Former Show Girl.

Enroute to Omaha Bossie and Miss McKean became chummy. During the Omaha engagement the dairy inspector paid gallant attentions to the maid from New York. After a week in St. Paul the show went to Chicago to play six weeks. Bossie journeyed to Chicago, where he stormed the young woman's heart and obtained a promise of marriage. Miss McKean finished the season with the show, went to her home in New York for a rest and came out to Omaha during September, when she and Bossie were married in Mayor Dahlan's office.

"Yes, that is our romance," Mrs. Bossie added. "Previous to eight months ago Mr. Bossie was a devoted and attentive husband. Many of my friends remarked that if their husbands thought as much of me, they would be happy. I went everywhere together. I even made silk shirts for him."

She looked out of the window again and remarked that if Mr. Bossie did not return soon she would have to think of going to work, for she did not have funds to carry her long.

"I am not able to go back to the show business," she reflected, "but I will do something. I can't help having a feeling, however, that Claude is just around the corner and will be back tomorrow. Something just tells me he will come back."

The canary chirped again and Mrs. Bossie brushed away a few more tears which came from "a woman's heart, a woman's life and a woman's wonderful love."

Showdown on Bonus Thursday

House G. O. P. Conference Called—Fight on for Mellon Tax Bill.

Washington, Jan. 8.—A showdown among house republicans on the soldiers' bonus was assured today with issuance of a formal call for a conference Thursday night for discussion of the question. The call, sent out by Representative Anderson of Minnesota, chairman of the conference, was so worded to permit consideration of taxation and other pending legislation.

With former service men in the house pressing for action on the bonus before the end of the month, the republican organization redoubled its efforts meantime to keep the Mellon tax bill from being displaced on the tentative legislative program. The republican leaders want the ways and means committee to complete its adoption of the tax bill before taking up the bonus, but the soldier bloc intends to introduce at the conference the resolution instructing the committee to lose no time in reporting the bonus bill.

Taxes, the soldiers' bonus, farm aid and Russia were subjects to which congress gave its attention today, either in debate on the floor or in committee.

Having failed to break the deadlock over the chairmanship of the interstate commerce committee yesterday, the senate faced a renewal of the contest, but with little prospect of a decision. Senator Smith, democrat, South Carolina, continued to lead yesterday, but with the insurgents and so-called progressives on the republican side supporting Senator Couzens, republican, Michigan, and the regulars voting for Senator Cummins, republican, Iowa, he fell several votes short of a necessary majority.

Supreme Court Reverses Suit

A mandate was received in federal court Tuesday from the United States supreme court reversing decisions of the local federal court and the court of appeals in the suit of Charles G. Binderup against the Pathe Exchange and 25 other moving picture concerns and distributing exchanges.

Binderup, who operated movie houses in Minden, Upland, Blue Hill, Alma, Franklin and Bloomington, Neb., alleged that the producers and distributors conspired to cut him off from his supply of pictures. He asked for $720,153 damages.

Judge Woodrugh held that he had no case when the suit came up for trial in 1921. The circuit court of appeals upheld him. The decision of the
