

Trenmore Cone Hunts Up Issues in Washington

Taxes and Rail Rates Interest Nebraska Democratic Candidate for Senate; Ready to Disown Bryan.

By P. C. POWELL, Washington Correspondent The Omaha Bee, Washington, Jan. 9.—Trenmore Cone, candidate for the democratic nomination for United States senator from Nebraska, arrived in Washington this week for the first time, he says, not the last time in his life. Trenmore believes firmly that a candidate to be successful needs issues. It is for those elusive, vote-catchers issues that Trenmore is in Washington this week getting first-hand information on matters political during those hours he is not getting lost on the entangling streets and avenues of the capital city. There are two things certain in the life of the ordinary man. One is death. The other is taxes. Trenmore is extraordinary in that to him three things are certain. Death, taxes and his nomination as democratic candidate for the highest office in the state.

Rail Rates and Taxes. Trenmore, however, knows that while candidates are born for instance, the Bryan family, they must need issues to win. He has an inkling of a number of platforms that would be the political palate of Nebraska. But he wants to get these issues square in his mind here in Washington.

One matter of paramount importance to the people of Nebraska, taxes, tariff and other things, according to Cone. So he came to Washington at a time when he can listen to arguments pro and con on the railroad consolidation plan. Trenmore is neither for or against the proposition at this time. He is merely forming an opinion while the arguments are under way before the interstate commerce committee.

Another proposition which is causing the gray matter in Trenmore's head to work overtime is the income tax. He thinks two or three years after a person files his income before he learns how much of his hard-earned cash shall be turned over to the government. It is too long and too hard on the nerves. Trenmore has some pertinent questions to ask the proper income tax official in Washington relative to this alleged abuse of governmental powers. The only reason Trenmore hadn't asked them at the time of this writing was because he was having one terrible time in locating both the proper revenue office and the revenue officer who would take the responsibility answering them.

Against C. W. Bryan. In fact, Trenmore, until just before he leaves Washington, has only one matter of public importance, one platform ready for utterance. That is, that Brother Charles has gone as high as he can in public life and is absolutely no business getting into the senatorial race.

As for Washington itself, Trenmore thinks less of George Washington as an engineer than he ever did before, because it was no other than George Washington who plotted out the city and its bustling streets. True, at the time, it was felt it was a matter of military sagacity to make it a city of mystic, abrupt ending streets.

However, Trenmore speaks the truth when he says the "war's over," and asks why not straighten out the streets and let political issue hunters have less difficulty in locating both themselves and the issues in Washington?

"Just before I leave I'll have some hot stuff for you," was Trenmore's parting promise to a newspaper man.

Kearney Up in Arms Over Gas Price War

Kearney, Neb., Jan. 9.—When the city allowed the municipal gas bill at franchise rates they started something. Private consumers feel they are entitled to the same consideration and they are threatening to pay their monthly bills on the same basis.

Thus there looms a wholesale cutting off of gas users or the gas company will bow to the will of the council and people. The company raised the gas rate 50 cents above franchise rates several years ago on a plea of high material costs.

Now, in the opinion of the council, prices have become sufficiently stabilized to warrant restoration of the franchise rate.
