

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

By THORNTON W. BURGESS. Yowler's Cousin, Who Is Called Yowler, Too. Who could that terrible fellow be?

felt that he ought to know. Who ever would try to catch Whitenose would surely try to catch Nanny and himself. If there was a chance. So it was something more than idle curiosity that urged Danny to watch from the little doorway to his home. For a while he saw and heard nothing. But he was sure that the stranger was still in the tree up which he had chased Whitenose. The branches of that tree were covered with long masses of soft, gray moss, such as he found only in the Sunny South. He cause of that moss Danny couldn't see into that tree, though he looked and looked and looked. But Danny could afford to be patient. In fact, he couldn't afford not to be. He had to know who this probable enemy was and how he looked. So Danny sat in his doorway and continued to wait. At last he saw the long, hanging moss in that tree move ever so little. Someone was coming down that tree. From the lowest branch a dark form bounded lightly to the ground only a few feet from where Danny was sitting. There it stood for a moment, giving Danny a splendid chance to see just what it looked like. Instantly Danny knew that he was looking at a cousin of Black Pussy, the Cat. There was no doubt that this was a member of the Cat family. His coat was mixed gray and reddish-brown, with faint blackish spots. His chin and throat were white. He was whitish underneath, and this was marked with black spots. His head was round and savage looking and there were a few long hairs on the tips of his ears. He was much bigger than Black Pussy, and had much longer legs and much bigger feet. But it was the tail on which Danny fixed his eyes. It was a stub of a tail, and as he stood there he kept that stub of a tail twitching. He stood there only for a moment or two, then bounded away lightly. Danny drew a long breath. He never had seen Yowler the Bob Cat up home in the North, but his cousin, Whitenose, the Wood Mouse, had told him about him and he knew that this stranger must be one of Yowler's family.

WEAK WOMEN

HEALTH IS MOST VITAL TO YOU Council Bluffs, Iowa.—"A few years ago after motherhood I could not gain back my strength. I developed quite a severe case of woman's trouble, suffered with bearing pains which would be so severe I would have to lie down. I became so weak that all I wanted to do was lie and rest. It seemed that every spark of vitality had left me. I consulted a doctor and he said nothing but an operation would help me, but I would not consent. I had seen Dr. Pierce's medicine advertised, so at once began taking the 'Favorite Prescription' and the Golden Medical Discovery' and it was not long until I noticed my appetite was returning. I could eat, so I knew the medicine was doing me good. I took about twelve bottles and it was well worth it, for it completely restored me to health, without the operation.—Mrs. W. H. Avis, 214 S. 19th St. All druggists sell Dr. Pierce's Family medicine—tablets or liquid.
