

WOMAN'S NEWS-FEATURES

Rural Women Have Lesson for Town Sisters

By ELEANOR HINMAN.

Signs of the times which may well give pause to the city woman were to be found at the home economics convention which closed Thursday night in Lincoln.

Time was when club work, community service, games and dramatics were a prerogative reserved for the woman of the cities. But here stood a group of women from farms and small towns, who are leaders in study groups, home dramatics and all kinds of community enterprise. No mean community is theirs, for their interests do not confine themselves within the city limits of any one village. Where the world of the farmer's wife a generation ago stopped short with the farmyard enclosure, her modern successor thinks in terms of a county at the smallest, and has considerable attention for the problems of the world outside.

Significant indeed is the report of Mrs. Harvey Essam of Gage county that the club women of Beatrice, learning of the interesting work being done by their country sisters in their extension clubs and home economics association, sent a hurry call to their rural sisters for instruction.

The impression made by the 250 delegates at Lincoln was that of a group of women from whom not only the town woman but the highest metropolitan might be willing to learn. As a whole, they knew how to stand up before an audience and speak their minds in an audible and interesting fashion. They knew how to do their hair and how to dress, and the attractiveness of their appearance was not diminished when the information leaked out that many of them are their own hairdressers, fashion designers and dressmakers. And they came with serious ideals and a record of accomplishment.

An observer could scarcely go away without the feeling that here is at least the germ of an agricultural civilization such as the speakers at the convention pictured as the goal of the present agricultural movement.

Reports of extension work in community study, dressmaking, hot school lunches, and so forth were made by delegates from 24 counties.

Delegates reporting were as follows: Mrs. Luther Burt, Buffalo county; Mrs. Ray Norris, Cass; Mrs. Mabel Lane Johnson, Clay; Mrs. W. P. McIntosh, Colfax; Mrs. Thomas Tighe, Cuming; Mrs. Roy Overton, Dawson; Mrs. Fred Eason, Dodge; Mrs. E. P. Noyes, Valley; Mrs. John Stephenson, Fillmore; Mrs. J. T. Coffey, Oxford; Mrs. Harvey Essam, Gage; Mrs. B. F. French, Pott; Mrs. Charles Cunningham Johnson, Polk; Mrs. M. K. Young, Lancaster; Mrs. A. R. Leavitt, Lincoln; Mrs. R. A. Stewart, Madison; Mrs. F. B. Cooksey, Nance; Mrs. Ernest Overton, Otoe; Mrs. D. M. Shaw, Elm Creek; Mrs. D. A. Jackson, Polk; Mrs. White Randall, Red Willow; Mrs. I. E. Cornelius, Richardson; Mrs. Albert Gustafson, Saunders; Mrs. Charles A. Snocke, Scotts Bluff; Mrs. Charles Rodeman, Cordova; Mrs. W. G. Appley, Thayer; Mrs. Nels Fredericksen, Thurston; Flavia Twombly, Valley; Mrs. Colley, Washington; Mrs. Edward Denton, Webster, and Mrs. Wittsche, Garfield.

No Junior League Show---Cabaret Instead

The Junior League Revue, foremost social event of the last few spring seasons, has been discarded.

At the January meeting of the league in the Bargas-Nash auditorium Thursday, the members voted to abandon plans for giving it in May, and to go forward with arrangements for a dinner dance with cabaret features.

The dinner dance will be a purely social affair, held soon after Easter. Its inauguration was decided upon, one of the members said, in fairness to donors to the Community Chest, who would have to give further in support of the revue, a production put on in the interest of charity.

A special board meeting will be held Thursday morning to decide details of the affair, and to name chairman.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunn Plan Trip to Africa.

Mr. and Mrs. O. W. Dunn sail January 30 from New York for Algeria, landing February 12.

"Our plans are indefinite," Mrs. Dunn said this morning. "We always go like tramps, wherever we will. However, it is probable we will motor into the desert, probably making a short caravan trip out of Tunis. We will spend April in Italy and will return to Omaha in June."

Could Dietz will sail for Africa on the same date. Mr. and Mrs. C. N. Dietz are indefinite in their plans for a tour to the "dark" continent.

W. B. A. Installation.

Mrs. Della M. Hall, Fremont, state commandant of the W. B. A., officiated at a public installation of officers of Omaha review, No. 6, in Moose temple.

Officers installed are: Minnie Homan, commandant; Mary Hopson, lieutenant commandant; Effie B. Crossner, past commandant; Mary Hayes, Boeber, picket; Ada Dober and Cora Whitlow, color bearers; Ida Goodwell, captain of guards; Emily Whittig, musician.

Mrs. Effie B. Crossner, who has served as commander for 15 years, was presented with a token of gratitude for her services to the review. The guard team presented a uniformed military drill. Delegates from Council Bluffs and Harmony review, No. 49, of this city were present.

Adele Garrison "My Husband's Love"

Dicky Promised When Lillian Cracked the Whip.

Lillian gave an extra curl of the whiplash to her last words, and I standing near her and listening tensely to her telephone conversation, was not surprised after an instant's interval to see her lips relax into a satisfied smile. It told me that Dicky had capitulated, and would carry out his mother's wishes.

"All right is right," she said, and I could imagine Dicky's impatient reiteration of the phrase, when he finally felt compelled to yield his objections to having the will drawn up which his mother wished William Harrison to have an opportunity to sign before he died.

"Please keep us advised of conditions as often as you can, on your mother's account," she went on, and then with a quick glance at me, she added, "Yes, Madge is right here."

She handed me the receiver and I took it with a reluctance and a feeling of pique that I would not have had her guess for many dollars. She had succeeded in conquering his mother's temperamental objections to his mother's plan where I had failed, and although I was heartily glad of her success, because I could see the necessity and the wisdom of the scheme Mother Graham had proposed, yet there was a pricking barb for my vanity in the knowledge that my husband had yielded to her insistence instead of mine.

Whether Dicky realized this or not, I do not know, but there was pain for me in the explosive irritation of his greeting when I had spoken the simple words, "Is there anything you want me to do?"

"Yes, there is. Take Lill out and boil her in oil. You've got a crust, sicking her on to me about that will thing, when you know she's got 10 bull pups tied to the mast for stubbornness and persistence. I suppose you felt you didn't have the strength to wear me down yourself, although you knew it was only a matter of time, so you turned the job over to her. Oh, I'm going to go through with it, now that I've promised—"

"I'll find out before you go through that this is about the craziest thing you've ever tried to put over."

"Advise the precious child to roll his hoop," Lillian whispered, and I translated the phrase in as conciliatory fashion as I could manage.

"Perhaps you're right," I said meekly, with a moue at Lillian, "but nothing matters now, only assuring mother that you are going to do what she wishes. I must go up to her now, for she is anxiously waiting to hear what you said."

"Well, tell her I'm the goat as usual. How is she standing it all, anyway?"

The swift transition from anger to anxiety was characteristic of my volatile husband, but in some curious, inconsistently feminine fashion, I felt my own resentment against him gone, and I answered his query gently.

"Wonderfully, so far, but I am afraid she is using every ounce of will power and strength she has in the effort. I think you ought to be like tramps, wherever we will, as possible. If you think it best, I could come in to New York and meet you with them and bring them out here, and you could return there for anything that was necessary."

"That might be a good idea," Dicky returned, suddenly tractable. "Goodbye, take care of yourself," and the receiver clicked its signal of dismissal.

"I'll go straight upstairs and tell mother everything is going as she planned," I said, turning toward the staircase.

"With no mention of the difficulties incurred," she warned with a smile.

"Indeed no," I returned, but when I reached my mother-in-law's room, where Mrs. Tiger sat, ready to answer her slightest summons, she looked up at me with the wan, set little smile which she seemed determined to keep upon her face as a symbol of her determination to keep down her weakness and grief as long as she was needed.

"Richard balked like a Texas steer, didn't he?" she asked, then to my great relief, saved me from answering by going on.

"I heard you and Mrs. Underwood going for him, and I was just about to get up and go to the extension up here, when I realized you'd brought him to time. He's just like his father, always saying 'no' first and fighting a thing when he meant to say 'yes' all the time. I remember when Lisa was a little thing, her father—oh, Margaret, Margaret!"

I answered the appeal of her outstretched arms, and held her quivering old body close to mine, while the tears and sobs, which she had held back so long and so bravely, had their way with her.
