It will probably cost a good dea more before the referendum is concluded, because referendums on the immense scale on which this one is being conducted are inevitably ex

The general judgment of Washington is that the public will decline to be shocked at whatever amount Mr Bok chooses to spend on what the public generally regards as a legitihate effort to get his ideas before the country, especially as the 're turns seem to indicate that upward of four-fifths of the public believe it the plan with some enthusiasm.

Bok's Money Behind Plan.

The only possible chance the irrec oncilable senators had to make any headway against Bok blew up when Bok said: "I defrayed every cent of the expense myself." That ended all ting out to the effect that some or all of the money was being provided by international bankers or by oth-

Up to that moment Senator Jim Reed of Missouri had been watching Bok with the attitude of a prosecuting attorney getting ready to pounce on some peculiarly odious criminal. The attitude of prosecuting attorney is one that Reed frequently has toward his political opponents.

Senator Reed Tamed.

At the beginning of the Bok hear ing, Reed glowered at Bok with an air of trying to make up his mind whether he should merely bite his initials in Bok's neck or chew him up entirely. After Bok said the money was all his, Reed had the air of having decided there was not enough in the Bok case to provide very substantial chewing. The audience was on Bok's side to

As a matter of fact, while Senator Reed in the beginning had his not infrequent manner of glowering belliger ency, later on the actual questions he asked Bok were sufficiently courteous both in substance and in wording. Neither could it be said that the other irreconcilable, Senator Moses, of New Hampshire, was unreasonably bellicose toward Bok when the latter said

The real reason for the way the audience expressed themselves is a feeling on the part of some of the public that the senate is standing stubbornly against those who would like to bring universal peace to the
