

Vet Roadmaster Quits "Q" Line After 43 Years

William Farlow of Wymore Began on Old K. C., St. J. & C. B.—Traveled 320,000 Miles in 20 Years.

Wymore, Neb., Jan. 25.—William F. Farlow, dean of the six roadmasters for the Wymore division of the Burlington railway, and one of the oldest roadmasters on any railway in Nebraska in point of service, was retired today on pension by the railway company, and will leave next week to spend the remainder of the winter in Tampa, Fla., after service of 43 years.

Mr. Farlow began his railway career when 19 years old, in the water service department at Tarkio, Mo., on March 1, 1880. The railway was known as the K. C., St. J. & C. B., a part of the present Burlington system.

During the forepart of 1881, as the Burlington built westward, Farlow came to what is now the Wymore division of the road, and on October 22, 1881, was transferred to Wymore, which had been platted only a few months, and was assigned to a position repairing cars.

He remained in this capacity until the spring of 1882 when he was assigned to a bridge gang, which built several of the bridges over small streams between Wymore and Hubbell and Wymore and Washington, Kan., being light pile bridges. In the spring of 1888 he was made foreman and conductor of a pile driver. After fourteen years of service as driver foreman, he again took charge of a bridge and carpenter gang, living at Nebraska City, and taking the place of R. A. Black, veteran foreman there, at his death in 1902. He resided at Nebraska City for two years in this capacity.

In 1904, upon the resignation of Roadmaster Ed Ryan, Farlow was transferred to Wymore and promoted to roadmaster by the railway, which position he continued to hold for 20 years, until his retirement today.

In his travels during the last 20 years in line of duty he estimates that he has ridden an average of 16,000 miles a year, a total of 320,000 miles, or over twelve times the circumference of the globe.

Mr. Farlow tells of assisting the crossing of railway traffic on "ice bridges" on the Missouri river in the early days, before the railway had bridges across the river at Nebraska City and Rulo. He states that when the ice began to form in the winter, the railway drove piles in the sand, allowing them to stand and freeze in the ice to steady them, and then threw a sort of pontoon bridge across to move traffic on.

Petrograd Now Is Leningrad

Former Capital of Russia Renamed in Honor of Dead Soviet Chief.

Moscow, Jan. 25.—Petrograd, renamed from St. Petersburg during the world war, has been renamed Leningrad, in honor of the dead premier, Nicolai Lenine.

Twice since the world war began the name of St. Petersburg, the old capital of Russia had been changed. On September 2, 1914, one month after the commencement of the war, the great city on the Neva, near the Gulf of Finland, with its extraordinary collection of edifices of impressive architectural beauty, the metropolis of Russia became Petrograd by imperial decree in order to eliminate the Teuton construction of the name by which it had been known since it was founded by Peter the Great in 1703.

On Wednesday dispatches from Moscow announced that a suggestion had been made that the dead premier of Russia should be honored by having the one-time center of Russia's sea-trade hereafter bear his name and apparently this honor has been accorded by rechristening it "Leningrad."

Nebraska Behind Development of Dairy Industry

Assurances of Co-Operation Received from All Parts of the State by Chamber of Commerce Secretary.

Communications from individuals and agencies throughout Nebraska, offering material participation in the plan for dairy development throughout the state are being received by J. M. Gillan, secretary of the agricultural committee of the Chamber of Commerce. It was under the auspices of the Omaha chamber that the plan for dairy development was formulated at a meeting in Omaha last Saturday of prominent Nebraskans interested in the movement.

A letter has been received from the Lions club of Kimball, Neb., telling of plans to purchase 100 head of Shorthorns and Holsteins, and sell them to the farmers of Kimball county on monthly payments.

Plans Buying Cows. C. J. Ireland of Yutan, Neb., telephoned a request for further particulars. He desires to purchase 15 or 20 dairy cows.

Grant Shumway of Lincoln, deputy secretary of agriculture, expressed his interest in the movement to make Nebraska a greater dairy state, and offered his co-operation toward that end during a visit here yesterday.

Many prominent Omahans and other Nebraskans have called and expressed their interest with offers of helping the association get under way.

"I am heart and soul in accord with your movement," said Martin W. Dimery of the American bank of Sidney, who was in Omaha recently. Mr. Dimery was unable to attend the conference because of illness.
